“World War II Dambusters” Program May 21

The Dakota Territorial Museum Brown Bag Lunch program at noon on Friday, May 21, will feature “World War II Dambusters,” presented by Sadie Stevens.

During World War II, British allies developed operation Chastise in which they bombed German dams to cause catastrophic damage to Germany's industrial assets resulting in military gain. The dambusters created man-made floods that took the lives of citizens and POW's but made no significant military gain.

Stevens will talk about the raids, aftermath, and more from the research she found, not online, but personally in London, England. Stevens is a Junior at Yankton High School and presented her research essay for the 2010 History Day competition.

All Brown Bag events are free and held at the Dakota Territorial Museum Conference Room at Westside Park. For more information, call (605) 665-3898.

Clean Boat Event Scheduled May 22

The third annual Clean Boat Event will be held Saturday, May 22, from 6 a.m.-2 p.m. This annual event will help to educate boaters about how and how invasive species such as the Asian Carp and Zebra Mussels have made their way to Gavins Point Dam.

These species haven't spread into Lewis and Clark Lake and this event will help to prevent the spread of these species farther upstream by educating the public.

People inadvertently help to spread these species on their boats and in their bait and livewells. With a few simple steps, (Inspect, Clean & Drain) boaters can help to assure that they aren't spreading invasive species.

Teams assisting in the effort will be made up of Federal and State agencies as well as volunteers.

Teams will be set up at seven boat ramps in both South Dakota and Nebraska in the Gavins Point Dam area. Boat docks included will be: Riverside Park Boat Ramp, The Bubble (Training Dike), Tailwaters, Marina, Midway, Gavins Point and Weigand Marina. There will be two shifts set up, from 6-10 a.m. and 10 a.m.-2 p.m. with volunteers needed for both shifts.

Volunteers will have the opportunity to work either shift or a portion of either shift. For more information or to volunteer, contact Marry Robb at 605-668-5211 or go to www.iwla.org/cleanboats.

RACES

Specter fell to two-term Rep. Joe Sestak, who spent three decades in the Navy before entering politics. Sestak was winning 54 percent of the vote to 46 percent for Specter. He told cheering supporters his triumph marked a “win for the people over the establishment, over the status quo, even over Washington, D.C.”

Sestak's campaign calling card was a television commercial that showed former President George W. Bush saying he could count on Specter, then a Republican, and then had Specter saying he had switched parties so he could win re-election. Once unleashed, it coincided with a steady decline in Specter's early lead in the polls, and signaled the end of the political line for the most durable politician of his generation in Pennsylvania.

Former Rep. Pat Toomey won the Republican nomination and will run against Sestak in the fall in what is likely to be one of the marquee races in the battle for control of the Senate.

Paul's victory was certain to add Kentucky to that list.

“I have a message, a message from the tea party, a message that is loud and clear and does not mince words: We have come to take our government back,” he said, a 47-year-old eye surgeon making his first run for office.

But the same energy that helped Paul to victory presented problems to be handled carefully by the Republicans in the run-up to November, when control of both houses of Congress will be at stake.

Paul has said he might not support his fellow Kentuckian, McConnell, for a new term as party leader. And no sooner had Tuesday's results been posted than Richard Viguerie, a longtime conservative warrior, suggested McConnell step aside.

The far-flung races took place a little less than five months before the midterm elections. President Barack Obama backed incumbents in his party's races, but despite the stakes for his legislative agenda the White House insisted he was not following the results very closely.

Whatever the fate of the parties, public opinion polls — and the defeat of two veteran lawmakers in earlier contests — already had turned the campaign into a year of living dangerously for incumbents.

High unemployment, an economy just now emerging from the worst recession in generations and Congress' decision to bail out Wall Street giants in 2008 all added to voters' unease, polls said. In a survey released shortly before the polls closed, ABC said voter expectations for the economy had turned optimistic for the first time in six years. At that, only 33 percent of those polled said so in the network's polling, compared with 29 percent saying the opposite.

In Oregon, Democratic Sen. Ron Wyden faced little opposition for nomination to a third full term.

In Kentucky, Paul had 59 percent of the vote to 35 percent for Grayson, who had been recruited to the race by the state's dominant Republican, U.S. Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell.

In a Democratic primary that commanded far less national attention, Attorney General Jack Conway defeated Lt. Gov. Daniel Mongiardo and will face Paul in the fall.

In Kentucky, Grayson had the support of McConnell as well as other establishment figures. But Paul countered with endorsements — and the political energy that flowed along with them — from tea party activists, former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin and Sen. Jim DeMint of South Carolina, a conservative eager to push his party rightward in advance of the broader fall campaign.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Palin called Paul's victory a “wake-up call for the country.”

According to his website, Paul, 47 and an ophthalmologist, is a “career doctor, not a politician.” He favors a balanced budget and paying off the national debt over time, but the website mentions no specifics.

He opposes all federal bailouts of private industry and government subsidies for alternative energy sources such as solar and wind power.

He has called Washington lobbyists a “distinctly criminal class” and favors banning lobbying and campaign contributions by anyone holding a federal contract exceeding $1 million.

The race marked the third time that tea party activists, a collection of disparate groups without a central political structure, have placed their stamp on Republican races.

Their votes at a Utah Republican convention helped deny a spot on the ballot to Sen. Bob Bennett, a conservative judged as not sufficiently so. And their backing helped propel one-time longshot Republican Marco Rubio to a lead in the primary polls in Florida's Senate race, prompting Gov. Charlie Crist to quit the party and run as an independent.

Vermillion, Cities Team Up For Windpower 2010

VERMILLION — For the first time, six South Dakota communities are partnering with the Governor's Office of Economic Development to attend North America's premier wind energy trade show, Windpower 2010, to be held May 23-26 in Dallas.

“Although the state has had a presence at this show since its inception, this is the first time we are exhibiting with community partners,” said Gov. Mike Rounds. “We have had tremendous success with this approach in other targeted industries, and we anticipate similar success with our community partners at Windpower 2010.”

Aberdeen, Brookings, Howard, Madison, Mitchell and

Vermillion are participating in the Governor's Office of Economic Development's (GOED) Trade Show Co-Op Program, which strives to recruit businesses to South Dakota.

“The ability to Co-Op with the state is a great advantage for Vermillion and helps us make the most of Vermillion Now! funds,” said Steve Howe, executive director of the Vermillion Area Chamber and Development Company. “Vermillion should have a presence in the alternative energy industry, and attending this show will allow us to interact with the major players in the industry under the banner of South Dakota. This approach gives us much greater access than if we were going it alone.”

COUNTY

The proposed 24,000-square-foot facility for the Highway Department would be located on land the county owns about a mile west of Highway 81 along Highway 50. It would replace the 70-year-old structure at 407 West 11th Street in Yankton.

The county hopes the facility can be built for between $1.3 million and $1.5 million.

One issue that must be resolved is whether B-Y Water can provide water to the facility. While the rural water district has lines in the area, commissioners were concerned that it would not be able to supply fire protection. Johnson said he would speak with B-Y officials on the subject.

Additionally, the commission said it will hold an open house at the old Highway Shop from 9-11 a.m. on June 4-5 so the public can get a first-hand look at why a new facility is needed.

Also Tuesday, the commission:

- gave approval to a wind energy conversion system ordinance developed by the Yankton Planning Commission for the extraterritorial jurisdiction, which is a one-mile area around Yankton in which both the county and the city share zoning authority;
- authorized the county auditor to advertise for proposals to
