The directors said that the children in "Henry and Ramona" have been very responsible about being quiet when others are performing and at learning their lines, a critical aspect of the show as the company will not actually start practicing on the stage until next week. YCTC utilizes the old Elks building in downtown Yankton for its rehearsal space.

"Because we will have so little actual time with the stage, we are stressing how important it is for the cast to know their lines and props," Vavra said. "It is a prop-heavy show, so even though they will not have worked with the set yet, they will know what they are supposed to be doing with the props. It will just be a matter of getting used to the stage."

Tickets for "Henry and Ramona" are available by calling Allison Spak at 660-6414 or YCTC at 689-0401; leave a message and phone number and your call will be returned. More information about YCTC is available at www.yctcwherethemagicbegins.org.
