Stamp Out Hunger Across America Returns

On Saturday, May 14, Campbell Soup Company will again join forces with the Tabor, Tyndall and Springfield rural carriers to Stamp Out Hunger across America, providing assistance to the millions of Americans who are struggling to put food on their tables every day.
 Now in its 19th year, the Stamp Out Hunger food drive, which is always held on the second Saturday in May, has become the nation's largest single-day food drive. In 2010, drive organizers representing nearly 1,500 U.S. Post Office branches across the country, collected a record-setting total of 77.1 million pounds of food donations. This pushed the historical total for the drive to more than one billion pounds of food.

"I'm incredibly proud of the partnership with Campbell Soup Company to support the Stamp Out Hunger food drive that has helped so many millions of families over the years," said Fredric V. Rolando, NALC president. "As letter carriers, we see people on our routes six days a week that must rely on the generosity and assistance of others to help provide something as basic as a meal. We're proud to have established a program that truly provides assistance in every community across the country," said Rolando.

Despite the generosity of millions of Americans who have supported the letter carriers' food drive in previous years, the need for food assistance has never been greater. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's annual study measuring food security in the United States, the number of Americans living in food insecure homes topped 50 million in 2009 (the most recent year that such data is available). Perhaps most alarming, of this total, approximately one in three people in America who is at hunger risk is a child (17.2 million).

To participate in the Stamp Out Hunger drive, Americans are encouraged to leave a sturdy bag containing non-perishable foods, such as canned soup, canned vegetables, pasta, rice or cereal next to their mailbox prior to the time of regular mail delivery on Saturday, May 14. The nation's 230,000 letter carriers will collect these food donations as they deliver the mail and take them to their Feeding America affiliated food bank or other hunger relief organization that service the more than 10,000 communities where collections are being made.

Feeding America is the nation's leading domestic-hunger-relief organization, providing hunger support to more than 37 million Americans every year. Today, one in eight Americans relies on the organization for food and groceries. In a recent survey conducted by Feeding America, it was determined that nearly half (46 percent) of all households the organization serves reported having to choose between paying for utilities or food.

For more information about the annual Stamp Out Hunger food drive in your community, ask your letter carrier, contact your local post office, visit either www.helpstampouthunger.com or www.facebook.com/StampOutHunger, or follow the drive at www.twitter.com/StampOutHunger.

and uneasiness," he said. "That's kind of the benchmark for where people will decide whether they're going to continue with travel plans or cancel them."

Madeja said AAA next week will come out nationally with its Memorial Day travel forecast, and "that is going to be a much more telling barometer, so to speak, of where we're headed this summer."

Despite South Dakota's regional marketing focus, the department continues its efforts to shine a national spotlight on

A tourism float that debuted at Macy's Day Parade last Thanksgiving generated hundreds of thousands of hits to the state's website.

A few weeks ago, Hagen sent a somewhat tongue in cheek press release inviting Prince William and Kate Middleton to take their honeymoon in South Dakota.

"You know, no other state did it," Hagen said. "And we got play in the U.K. over that press release. It played in other parts of the country."

Facts

"We have released that there will be about $2.2 million in cuts if the opt out fails and about $800,000 in cuts if the opt-out passes," he said. "The federally funded elementary programs will be based on how much money we get back. We won't know until we actually get the federal allocation. At the high school, there were four teaching positions eliminated and we are going to bring back two. There were six eliminated at the middle school and we would bring back four. There would still be cuts."

In regards to grade 5-8 activities, the plan is to not bring back fifth grade activities.

"We would like to bring back grade 6-8 activities," Gertsema said. "We will go to a middle school sports model. In retrospect when we moved to the middle school concept, we should have probably dropped fifth grade sports, but we didn't. We really believe kids need something to do after school at that level."

Question: Are there any laws covering the opt-out regarding what people can do if taxes go up? For instance, my landlord announced to us renters that if the opt-out goes through, our rent will go up $60 per month. Can they do that?

Answer: Yankton City attorney David Hosmer said that while landlords cannot unilaterally raise rent, they can renegotiate leases.

"Leases are either on a monthly basis, a six-month term or an annual term," he said. "So, lets say the opt-out passes and somebody wants to raise the rent. If it is a month-to-month lease, the owner can call and say, 'I want to raise the rent next month. If you don't like it, you can leave.' If it is in the middle of a six-month term, they can't raise it in the middle unless the renter agrees. At the end of the six months, they can say we are raising the rent, if you don't like it you can leave. Same as with a year lease. If they call and say, 'I am going to change it and you can't do anything about it,' that is a breach of contract and they can't do that.

Hosmer explained that, ultimately, if a landlord wants to pass all the costs of the taxes down to the tenants they can, they just have to follow the rules.

"The rules are you have to negotiate with the tenant. If the tenant doesn't like the new rates they can leave," he said. "I don't think there are any other laws in the city or state I can think of that would apply."

Hosmer added, "For what it is worth, if I were a tenant, my question would be, 'OK, you are going to raise my rent this year corresponding with your taxes going up. If they don't take the full amount of the opt-out next year, are my rental rates going to go down next year?' From a tenants' perspective, they understand rents do go up, but if they are given a reason for the rents to go up, what happens if that factor then changes?"

"In supply and demand in the community, I think it is unlikely all the landlords are going to raise their rents at the same time. If a landlord picks up that everyone else is raising their rents, they will advertise that they didn't raise their rates as an enticement to get renters to their properties. In addition, for what it is worth, some of the apartment owners in the Yankton community are institutions from outside of Yankton. The likelihood they would pass the tax increase on is less likely than if it were a small landlord. A smaller landlord has a more difficult time assuming a large debt. I will be honest with you, I have sympathy for landowners; they (would be) taking a pretty big hit here. I can't change what they do in Pierre, but I sure wish they would take a look at changes."

CORRECTION

Due to inaccurate information provided the Press & Dakotan, the amount that would be raised by the Bon Homme County wheel tax was incorrect in Wednesday's edition. The tax would raise $38,500 during the final six months of 2011 and then $77,000 annually in subsequent years.
