Congressional Art Contest Winners Are Announced

WASHINGTON — Rep. Kristi Noem announced Josh LaRoche as the winner of the 2011 Congressional Art Competition from South Dakota.

LaRoche won for untitled colored pencil drawing of a chameleon. He attends Stanley County High School where his art teacher is Audrey Nelson. The artwork will hang in the U.S. Capitol complex along with the winning artwork from other congressional districts for the next year.

The second-place winner is Juelle Meyer for her photograph, "Retired." Meyer attends Belle Fourche High School where her art teacher is Jennifer Roberts. Meyer's artwork will hang in Rep. Noem's congressional office in Washington for one year.

"My congratulations go out to Josh for his winning entry in the 2011 Congressional Art Competition. I am honored to hang Josh and Juelle's artwork in the Capitol and in my office," Noem said. "I wish the best to all of South Dakota's young artists who submitted pieces for the contest."

The Congressional Art Competition is organized by Rep. Noem's office in partnership with the South Dakota Arts Council and South Dakotans for the Arts/South Dakota Alliance for Arts Education. The Congressional Art Competition began in 1982, providing members of Congress with an opportunity to recognize talent in their home districts. Since 1982, more than 650,000 high school students have participated in the competition through the encouragement of their representatives.

Michael Pangburn, director of the South Dakota Arts Council said, "We're thrilled to work with Rep. Noem's office on this project. We saw a lot of talent from all across South Dakota this year, and Josh and Juelle's pieces will represent our student's well."

In addition to getting their artwork displayed in Washington, D.C., the students will receive cash awards from South Dakotans for the Arts. For first place, LaRoche receives $200, and Meyer will receive $50 for second place.

Winning artwork can be seen by clicking here <http://noem.house.gov/index.cfm/files/serve?File_id=432a54c2-aad1-4fc9-9748-028484d7a9c3> for LaRoche's piece and here <http://noem.house.gov/index.cfm/files/serve?File_id=12c29dff-1fa3-4a55-ba0e-a3d9ad2ea88a> for Meyer's piece.

disorder aren't the only problem. While cable channels are accustomed to smaller audiences and usually have the patience — and financial wherewithal — to let a program blossom, cash-strapped broadcast network executives often have itchy trigger fingers.

"There is a cynicism that if it is good and complicated, it is going to get canceled," said Ryan. "People don't want to get emotionally involved."

"Network television has to be the Bruce Springsteen, while cable can be Patti Smith," said Heller.

Some cable networks, however, are also backing away from the art-house approach. FX canceled "Lights Out" and Ryan's "Terriers" after one season even though both had the love of critics.

"Three years earlier, FX would have kept both on," said "Lights Out" executive producer Warren Leight, who added that FX President John Landgraf had told him before his show premiered, "Don't get me 'Mad Men' numbers and 'Mad Men' acclaim, that's not what I need." (AMC's "Mad Men" is a critical darling but has a relatively small audience even by cable standards.)

The new technologies, which include the DVR and iTunes, present other headaches for networks as well. More than one-third of the audience for NBC's family drama "Parenthood" tunes into a recorded version of the show. "They know they can watch anytime," said the show's executive producer, Jason Katims.

The problem though is that the audience that uses a DVR, iTunes or Hulu isn't nearly as valuable to the network and advertisers as those viewers who watch live because commercials are either fast-forwarded, out-of-date or not even in the program.

Even top industry executives sometimes prefer watching on their own schedule.

"I watched the first two seasons of HBO's "The Wire" on DVD and once I caught up, I was annoyed because I didn't want to watch one episode a week, I wanted to watch three or four episodes a night," said Katherine Pope, a former NBC executive who now oversees the television operations for Chernin Entertainment.
