Quick Hitters

BASEBALL

Jim Thome returned to the Minnesota Twins lineup on Monday night and was slated to hit sixth against the Seattle Mariners. Thome missed 19 games with a left oblique strain and was activated from the disabled list after Sunday's loss to Arizona. The Twins also say All-Star catcher Joe Mauer could be the designated hitter in an extended spring training game this week. He's been out since April 14 with leg weakness.

BASKETBALL

Coach Ed DeChellis, who led Penn State to the NCAA tournament this year, resigned Monday to take the vacant job at Navy. The 15-year coaching veteran said he found "a calling" in announcing the surprise move two months after orchestrating his alma mater's first NCAA bid in a decade. The Nittany Lions lost to Temple, 66-64, in the second round. ... The Portland Trail Blazers abruptly dismissed general manager Rich Cho on Monday, after less than a year on the job. Miller said Cho was "shocked" when informed of the decision on Monday morning. Chad Buchanan, the team's director of college scouting, will serve as acting general manager. ... Chicago Bulls center Joakim Noah apologized again Monday for directing an anti-gay slur at a fan during Game 3 of the Eastern Conference finals, and was bracing for punishment — likely a large fine — from the NBA. Noah and NBA officials met Monday morning. ... Kurt Rambis appeared at a pre-draft workout of prospects in Minnesota on Monday despite still not knowing if he will return as Timberwolves coach next season. The Wolves are hosting dozens of scouts, executives and coaches around the NBA over the next three days to get a look at some of the players who will be considered in the draft next month. Rambis was a surprise appearance at the workouts because Wolves president David Kahn has not said if Rambis will be brought back for a third season.

FOOTBALL

A federal magistrate has rejected the NFL's request for more time to file a response in the pending antitrust lawsuit filed by its locked-out players. U.S. Magistrate Judge Jeanne Graham ruled Monday that the NFL must answer by June 6. The league had asked for a July 6 deadline to answer a lawsuit filed by current players but since amended to include complaints from retirees led by former Hall of Famer Carl Eller. ... The Detroit Lions say they have made some adjustments to their business operation because of the NFL lockout. The team would not provide any more details Monday.

Run S.D. Brooks Distance Academy June 16-18
