'Bike To School Day' Is May 9

LINCOLN, Neb. — Safe Routes Nebraska encourages children and families to switch gears this spring in honor of the first-ever National Bike to School Day on Wednesday, May 9.

"Kids who bike or walk to school are more alert and ready to learn when they get to class," said Angela Barry, Safe Routes Nebraska program coordinator. "Even 10 to 15 minutes of low-impact activities like biking or walking can go a long way toward improving fitness — and it's fun."

National Bike to School Day seeks to raise awareness about the need for safe routes to bike and walk and emphasize the importance of such issues as increasing physical activity among children, reducing traffic congestion and protecting the environment. Bike to School Day is a national, bike-focused celebration for students and builds on the popularity and success of International Walk to School Day, celebrated worldwide in October.

To celebrate the inaugural National Bike to School Day, the National Center for Safe Routes to School will give away 10 bike racks in partnership with Saris Cycling Group <http://www.saris.com/>. All groups who register National Bike to School Day events are automatically entered to win.

Nebraska schools and community groups can register their events at www.walkbiketotoschool.org.

Barry offers these tips to parents:

- Wear a helmet — No matter how short the ride is, wearing a certified bike helmet that fits properly is an absolute must for your child.

- Have the right equipment — It's important to have a bike that's the right size for your child. A bike should also be equipped with reflectors, front and back, to increase visibility for cars.

- Choose the safest route — Plan a route that's clear of obstructions and includes intersections marked with stop signs and stoplights. Practice the route with your children and point out potential areas of concern, such as hidden driveways and potholes.

- Teach children proper bicycle hand signals — To signal a right turn, extend the left arm out and bend the elbow so that fingers point upward. To signal a left turn, extend the left arm straight out from the shoulder. To signal a stop, extend the left arm out and bend the elbow so your fingers point downward. All signals should be made with the left arm.

- Use common sense — Remind kids not to go too fast or show off with fancy tricks while riding. Urge them to follow basic rules of the road regarding street signs, traffic signals and safety precautions.

- Avoid strangers — Tell children not to speak to strangers and to ride away if approached. If possible, identify safe houses along the route that your children can go to for help.

"A few simple steps provide parents with peace of mind and give children the confidence they need to safely bike to school," said Barry.

NSP Educates On Seat Belt Usage

LINCOLN, Neb. — The Nebraska State Patrol continues its efforts to reduce the potential for automobile crashes resulting in injury or death by providing education programs focusing on seat belts and youthful drivers. The educational programs are made possible thanks in part to a grant from the Nebraska Office of Highway Safety (NOHS).

According to statistics from the NOHS, males and females in the 14-20 year old age group represent the highest number of unbelted fatalities in Nebraska, with 56 percent of young driver fatalities occurring on weekends.

"Saving lives is all about voluntary compliance," said Colonel David Sankey, Superintendent of the Nebraska State Patrol. "We hope, by being able to see what happens in a rollover crash and feel how a seat belt works, more drivers will choose to obey the law and buckle-up."

Running through the month of June, NSP Community Service Officers (CSO) will provide educational programs utilizing the agency's Rollover Simulators and Seat belt Convincers. The Rollover Simulator demonstrates what happens in a rollover crash in which the vehicle is traveling just 30 mph. The Seat belt Convincer is an interactive tool which allows the participant to experience a low impact crash and feel how a seat belt works.

AAA:

Leaving Child In A Hot Car Can Be Deadly

SIOUX FALLS — As South Dakotans get ready for another long, hot summer, AAA reminds parents and care-givers to be especially careful not to leave children or pets in hot, parked cars, even for a few minutes.

"Every summer, we hear the often tragic stories of what happens when youngsters are inadvertently left behind in a vehicle," said Susan Peterson, spokesperson for AAA South Dakota. "According to San Francisco State University, the inside temperature of a car can rise 19 degrees in just ten minutes. On a summer day in South Dakota, the inside temperature of a car can reach more than 100 degrees in a very short time. Heatstroke can occur in an adult when the temperature reaches 104 degrees and death can occur at 107 degrees. For a child, it's even less."

While a lot of us realize children can be harmed by being left in a hot car; they can also be injured by being accidentally trapped in a hot car. It is important to make sure cars are locked when not in use.

"Pet owners should also realize the danger of leaving pets in hot cars. Cracking a window or parking in the shade is not enough," Peterson said. "Before traveling with a pet, think about your route and any stops you'll be making. Pets may be safer left at home."

Here are AAA's best hot car safety tips:

- Never leave a child unattended in a car, even for a minute, and even if the windows are tinted or down. The same applies to pets and the elderly.
- Never leave car keys where children have access to them.
- When vehicles are unoccupied, keep doors locked and windows closed at all times, even when the vehicle is in a garage or on a driveway.
- When you first place a child in a car seat in the back seat of the car, also open the glove compartment door, flip down the passenger side visor or put a purse in the back seat. These actions can serve as visual reminders that a child is in the back seat.
- Make sure all children leave the vehicle when you reach your destination. Be certain no one is accidentally left behind.
- If you see a child alone in a locked, hot parked car, immediately call 9-1-1 for emergency assistance.
