Farmers Union Announces District Camp Date

VIBORG — All children ages 6-13 are invited to attend South Dakota Farmers Union's District I & II Summer Camp scheduled for May 29-June 1 at Swan Lake Christian Camp near Viborg.

Districts I & II include Bon Homme, Charles Mix, Clay, Douglas, Hutchinson, Lincoln, Turner, Union, Yankton, Aurora, Brule, Buffalo, Davison, Hanson, Jerauld, Lake, McCook, Miner, Minnehaha, Moody and Sanborn counties.

This year's camp is themed "Wild About Cooperation," and will include activities that teach children about the benefits of working together. This year's district camp coincides with the United Nation's declaration of 2012 as the International Year of Cooperatives.

"Cooperatives contribute so much to our state's rural communities and we want to celebrate all that co-ops have done for us," said Pat Larson, District II Education Director. "The kids who attend camp will get the chance to learn more about the cooperative philosophy in a fun, exciting and safe environment. We'll have games, singing, crafts, canoeing, camp fires, and other camp traditions that the kids will really enjoy."

Campers will play games to test their knowledge about cooperatives and Farmers Union. They'll also build their own "Co-op City," and will create a commercial for their cooperative to be presented at parent's night. They'll also complete a nature mobile craft to take home. Each child will also receive a free T-shirt.

All parents, members and friends are invited to attend a supper and program at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 31. Pre-registration is required and payment for supper is due by May 31.

Registration forms can be found online at www.sdfu.org. You can also pick them up at your local Farmers Union Insurance office, or your local cooperative. Send registration and medical release form by May 19 to: Pat Larson, 40062 231st St., Woonsocket, SD 57385.

Obama and many Democrats have opposed for environmental reasons.

"We ought to quit taking jabs at one another to score political points," said Rep. Nick Rahall, D-W.Va.

The tactic has been given the nickname "poison pill" because it sometimes causes the demise of the legislation to which the provision is attached.

"They do it because, in part, voters are not fully informed about legislation and a lot of votes are difficult to understand," said Marc Meredith, a political scientist at the University of Pennsylvania who has studied voters' decision making.

"You can put members of Congress in a tough spot because voters aren't fully informed about why members voted in a certain way."

Shortly after the House voted

April 27 to approve the GOP student loan bill, paid for by cutting Obama's health overhaul and supported by just 13 Democrats, Republicans sent news releases to dozens of congressional districts.

Democrats decided "protecting the Democrats' government takeover of health care was more important than helping future college graduates," the releases said.

Democrats argued it was wrong to cut health care programs to keep student loan interest rates from growing. Yet they were happy to use the tactic after two-thirds of Republican senators voted against a Democratic bill extending programs to protect women from violence and adding new protections for gays and transgender people.

Republicans said Democrats purposely inserted those provisions to make it impossible for many GOP senators to vote "yes." But that didn't stop a fundraising email by House Democrats' campaign arm accusing the GOP of "trying to derail the Violence Against Women Act."
