backpack were fireworks that had been emptied of their gunpowder.

The lawyers for the Kazakh students said their clients had nothing to do with the bombing and were just as shocked by the crime as everyone else. Phillipos’ attorney, Derege Demissie, said outside court: “The only allegation is he made a misrepresentation.”

At a court appearance, the Kazakh students did not request bail and will be held for another hearing May 14. Phillipos was held for a hearing on Monday. If convicted, Kadyrbayev and Tazhayakov could get up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Phillipos faces a maximum of eight years behind bars and a $250,000 fine.

Three people were killed and more than 260 wounded on April 15 when two bombs exploded near the marathon’s finish line. Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, died after a gunfight with police days later. His 19-year-old brother was captured and lies in a prison hospital. Their mother has said the allegations against them are lies.

Investigators have not said whether the pressure cooker bombs used in the attacks were made with gunpowder extracted from fireworks.

Kadyrbayev and Tazhayakov have been in jail for more than a week on allegations they were in violation of their student visas, one because he was skipping classes, the other because he was no longer enrolled. All three men charged Wednesday began attending UMass with Tsarnaev in 2011, according to the FBI.

Tazhayakov was allowed to return to the U.S. from Kazakhstan in January despite not having a valid student visa, a federal law enforcement official told The Associated Press. His student visa status had been terminated because he was academically dismissed from the university, said the official, who was not authorized to discuss the case and spoke on condition of anonymity.

The FBI said that before Tsarnaev’s roommate let the three friends into the room, Kadyrbayev received a text message from Tsarnaev that read: “I’m about to leave if you need something in my room take it,” according to the FBI. When Tazhayakov learned of the message, “he believed he would never see Tsarnaev alive again,” the FBI said in the affidavit.

It was unclear from the court papers whether authorities believe that was an instruction from Tsarnaev to destroy evidence.

Once inside Tsarnaev’s room, the men noticed a backpack containing fireworks, which had been opened and emptied of gunpowder, the FBI said.

The FBI said that Kadyrbayev knew when he saw the fireworks that Tsarnaev was involved in the bombings and decided to remove the backpack “to help his friend Tsarnaev avoid trouble.”

Kadyrbayev also decided to remove Tsarnaev’s laptop “because he did not want Tsarnaev’s roommate to think he was stealing or behaving suspiciously by just taking the backpack,” the FBI said.

After the three returned to Kadyrbayev’s and Tazhayakov’s apartment with the backpack and computer, they watched news reports featuring photographs of Tsarnaev. The FBI said Kadyrbayev told authorities the three men then “collectively decided to throw the backpack and fireworks into the trash because they did not want Tsarnaev to get into trouble.”

Kadyrbayev said he placed the backpack and fireworks along with trash from the apartment into a large trash bag and threw it into a garbage bin near the men’s apartment, according to court papers.

When the backpack was later found, inside it was a UMass-Dartmouth homework assignment sheet from a class Tsarnaev was taking, the FBI said.

The court papers do not say what happened to the laptop.

In a footnote, the FBI said: “Tazhayakov also informed the FBI agents that while eating a meal with Dzhokhar and Kadyrbayev approximately one month prior to the marathon bombing, Dzhokhar had explained to Kadyrbayev and Tazhayakov that he knew how to make a bomb.”

Robert Stahl, an attorney for Kadyrbayev, said his client “absolutely denies the charges” and didn’t know that the backpack and fireworks were part of the bombing case. Kadyrbayev is “just as shocked and horrified by the violence in Boston that took place as the rest of the community is,” the lawyer said.

He also denied that Kadyrbayev instantly recognized Tsarnaev’s photo, saying: “His first inkling came much later.”

Tazhayakov’s lawyer, Harlan Prottass, said Tazhayakov “feels horrible and was shocked to hear that someone he knew at the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth was involved with the Boston Marathon bombing.”

Kadyrbayev and Tazhayakov lived at an off-campus apartment in New Bedford, about 60 miles south of Boston, and got around in a car registered to Kadyrbayev with a souvenir plate that read “Terrorista (hash)1.” The car was pictured on Tsarnaev’s Twitter feed in March.

The plate was a gag gift from some of Kadyrbayev’s friends, meant to invoke his penchant for late-night partying rather than his political sentiments, Kadyrbayev’s lawyer said last week.

ing the same period.

The NWS forecast 3-6 inches of precipitation through today (Thursday) in extreme southeast South Dakota and parts of far northeast Nebraska. The snowfall is somewhat banded and elevation dependent, meaning snow amounts will likely vary greatly over short distances. Higher elevations will receive more snow than lower elevations.

As May begins, the NWS has taken a look back in comparing March-April 2012 with March-April 2013.

“March and April of 2013 has been one of the coldest on record for much of the Plains,” the report says. “What it makes even more remarkable is that last year was one of the warmest March and April periods on record.”

FBI Seeks Data On 3 In Benghazi Attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI announced Wednesday that it is seeking information on three people who were on the grounds of the U.S. diplomatic mission in Benghazi, Libya, when it was attacked last year.

The bureau posted photographs of the three people and said they may be able to provide information to help in the investigation of the attack.

“We need your help to solve this crime,” the FBI said in releasing the photographs.

The attack on the Benghazi compound on Sept. 11, 2012, killed the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans.

In a posting on the FBI’s website, the law enforcement agency urged anyone with information to text or e-mail BenghaziTips\(at\)ic.fbi.govic.fbi.gov) or to submit information confidentially at <https://forms.fbi.gov/benghazi-en>.

Congressional Republicans are continuing to pepper the Obama administration with questions about the attack.

have a cacher profile or handle when they log in and profiles of other cachers can be checked online also as to where their hunt has taken them and what they found.

When geocaching was brand new, sometimes the containers were vandalized but Braun said a lot of that came from lack of education. People would see a container and not know what it was. People are smarter now and now if a cache is vandalized, it’s mugged — a term from Harry Potter.

Braun estimates in a 15-mile radius of the Crofton area there are 150 geocaches ready to be found. For the weekend event, he will be “publishing” 12 new geocache sites on the geocaching.com site Friday noon, which he has placed this year. He makes all his geocache containers and his favorite is a fake bolt which he drilled out, added a magnet and stuck it to one of the Crofton city signs. He has fooled many cachers with his ingenuity.

Another cache he created is one he affectionately calls tree baby. He covered an ammo can with tree bark, added eyes and a pacifier and hid it along Highway 12.

“What can I say?” said Braun with a laugh. “It was a long winter.”

Braun believes geocaching is great for tourism and he cited a recent article in a Nebraska publication which said it was one of the top five activities which attracts people to small communities in the Midwest.

When the Yankton weekend event kicks off with the early-bird caches being published at noon on Friday, followed by an evening gathering at the Argo for socializing with fellow cachers, a geocacher from Switzerland will be enjoying all the fun as well as visitors from Rapid City, Watertown, Brookings, Minneapolis/St. Paul, Lincoln and Pierre.

Saturday’s activities begin at 9 a.m. at the Yankton Library and along with treasure hunting, a flash mob of cachers will occur somewhere in Yankton during the day. A barbecue will be held Saturday evening in Riverside Park and three night caches will be located on the Nebraska side of the Missouri River in the new Primitive Trail area of the National Park Service underneath the Meridian Walking Bridge. Flashlights will be needed to find the fluorescent markers for the caches. A Sunday brunch will conclude the weekend game event.
