You'll Really Dig Into 'Last Ones'

"We'll Be the Last Ones to Let You Down" by Rachael Hanel; © 2013, University of Minnesota Press; 196 pages

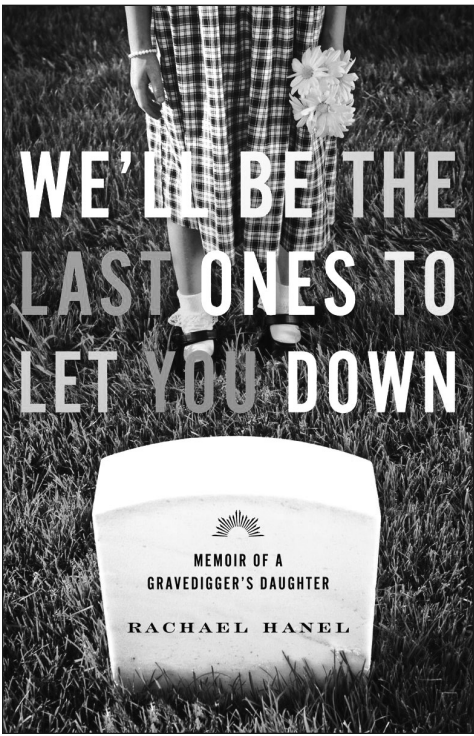

BY TERRI SCHLICHENMEYER

When anybody wants the real story, you've got it.

Yep, you've got your ear to the ground and that scanner you bought. Or maybe you've got good connections to bring you the juiciest gossip, scandals and troubles, births and moves, and the real dirt on who's died and why. However it happens, you've got the scuttlebutt and you never disappoint your audience — although, once you've read "We'll Be the Last Ones to Let You Down" by Rachael Hanel, you'll hope it's a friend with your final scoop.

If you lived in Waseca County, Minn., a couple decades ago, you may have known Paul "Digger O'Dell" Hager. If someone you loved died in Waseca County, you surely knew him because he "made a living from people's inability to keep on living," says his daughter. Digger made graves for "farmers and accountants, teachers and mechanics, teenagers and parents, babies and grandparents." For Rachael Hanel, being the grave digger's daughter was just like being anybody's kid — with a twist. She grew up riding her bike along cemetery roads, mowing graveyard lawns and playing among tombstones. Her imagination took her, not to magical places but to a time when the dead were alive. Hanel envisioned life for her great-grandparents, both victims of influenza. She wondered how her grandmother, who bore 16 children, coped with the losses of her two baby daughters. Knowing too much about death, Hanel obsessed about it.

"It takes a village to raise a child," she says, "and my village was the graveyard."

U Art Galleries Offers 'Japanese Printmaking' Summer Camp

VERMILLION — The University Art Galleries at the University of South Dakota will host a Summer Art Camp for kids, June 10-14.

The theme of this summer's camp is "Japanese Printmaking," as Japanese prints from the University Art Galleries permanent collection will be on display in Gallery 110, which is located in the Warren M. Lee Center for Fine Arts on USD's campus. Students attending the camp will study these prints and learn to make their own Japanese block prints.

The camp, open to kids ages 8 to 12, is from noon to 4 p.m. each day.

A final reception showcasing camp artwork is scheduled for 3 p.m. on Friday, June 14, at Gallery 110.

The fee to attend the camp covers all expenses, including a daily snack. To register for the camp, contact Alison Erazmus, Gallery Director, by calling (605) 677-3177 or by email at Alison.Erazmus@usd.edu.

GP Fish Hatchery Open House Saturday

The Gavins Point National Fish Hatchery, located 3 miles west of Yankton on Highway 52, will be hosting an open house event with tours of the hatchery on Saturday, May 25, from 1-4 p.m.

Hot dogs and bottled water will be served. Friends Group membership opportunities will be available.

Parks Events Slated For Holiday Weekend

Missouri National Recreational River — Southeast South Dakota's and Northeast Nebraska's only National Park — will open the 2013 season with the following ranger programs this weekend:

- Saturday May 25
— Lewis & Clark Visitor Center at Gavins Point Dam, 11 a.m.-1 p.m.: "Tokens of Friendship?" — For Junior Rangers. Peace medals were an important part of negotiations and treaties with American Indians, including Lewis & Clark's contacts. A National Park Ranger reveals their mixed meanings while you make your own decorated peace medal.
- Sunday, May 26
— Lewis & Clark Visitor Center at Gavins Point Dam, 11 a.m.-1 p.m.: "River Wheel." — Discover America's greatest river as you spin the wheel, answer questions about the Missouri River and win a prize.

— Fort Randall Historic Site west of Pickstown, 1:30 p.m.: "Fort Randall: Citadel on the Missouri." — Following the 1 p.m. Fort Randall reenactment and cannon firing, National Park Rangers will lead a tour of the fort site and reveal its history through the experiences of some of the residents of this outpost, a key link in the chain of forts surrounding the Lakota people.

- Monday, May 27
— Lewis & Clark Visitor Center at Gavins Point Dam, 11 a.m.-1 p.m.: "Free Land!" — The Homestead Act gave away millions of acres of land, but was it really free? Experience a taste of life on the prairie and learn the true cost of "free" land in this ranger-staffed exhibit of typical homesteader goods and building materials.

USD Faculty Award Winner Focus Of Current Exhibit

VERMILLION — University Art Galleries at the University of South Dakota announces the opening of "Outbound, Looking Back," an exhibition featuring work by USD Associate Professor of Art Phillip Michael Hook. A video projection exhibit, "Outbound, Looking Back" shows imagery that reflects Hook's experiences living along the Missouri River.

"Outbound, Looking Back" came about as I began considering how I could extend the discussion I had been following in my work with "Beyond Appearances," a body of mixed media work on paper that explores my tendency to see the world around me in layers and organize visual information in horizontal ribbons," said Hook, who received the first UAG Faculty Exhibition Award. "Much of my work has referenced the river through imagery of water, bridges and fields."

"Outbound, Looking Back," on display through June 7 at the John

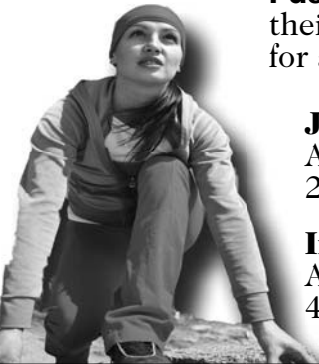

A. Day Gallery in the Warren M. Lee Center for Fine Arts, includes a closing reception from 5-7:30 p.m. on June 7 for the artist. The exhibition and reception are free and open to the public.

University Art Galleries established the Faculty Exhibition Award to encourage the development of creative art projects by USD Art Department faculty. Through generous donations from USD alumni, Cathy Palmer and Karen Chesterman, the Faculty Exhibition Award includes a stipend of $1,000 for the artist to generate a new art project for the Day Gallery.

The Day Gallery is open 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Monday through Friday, and on the weekends by special appointment. For more information about upcoming exhibitions, email Alison Erazmus, director of the University Art Galleries, at Alison.Erazmus@usd.edu or call at (605) 677-3177.
