'Killing' Is Back From The Dead On AMC

BY GREG BRAXTON © 2013, Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — AMC's "The Killing," about the grisly murder of young Rosie Larsen, was pronounced dead at the end of a troubled two-season run that included declining ratings amid a revolt by once-supportive critics and fans over what they per-ceived to be the failed promise to end the first season by revealing the identity of the killer.
But despite its cancellation,

"The Killing" did not rest in peace.

The faithful, including some network executives and creator / executive producer Veena Sud, always held out a glimmer of hope that the series, which earned high praise for its moody tension and the performance of leads Mireille Enos and Joel Kinnaman, might somehow be resurrected.

Now, almost a year after its "series finale," "The Killing" has risen and will be back for a third season beginning Sunday, with Enos, Kinnaman and Sud on board.

The story picks up more than a year after the close of the Larsen investigation. Troubled Seattle homicide detective Sarah Linden (Enos) has quit the force and is trying to put her life back together, while former partner Stephen Holder (Kinnaman) has risen in the ranks and become a respected investigator.

A new mystery brings the pair back together: Holder's search for a runaway girl who has become part of a band of wayward teens living by their wits on the streets of Seattle. The hunt leads to the gruesome discovery of murders apparently connected to a previous case headed up by Linden. When Holder seeks Linden's help, she is reluctantly drawn back into her former life.

"I feel blessed and so lucky," Sud said in a telephone interview. "This season represents an incredible opportunity to continue to tell the story of these great characters. I'm very grateful."

She said she devoted extensive research into the lives of runaway street kids as a backdrop for the show's return so "we can create a tapestry for Linden and Holder to play. We really wanted to highlight the best of Seasons 1 and 2 and continue what worked — the atmospheric storytelling, the investigation, looking at the impact beyond the victims, what are the shock waves that go through the world when someone is murdered."

In mapping out the new season, Sud promoted co-executive producers Dawn Prestwich and Nicole Yorkin, who had been with the series since the beginning, to executive producers.

Said Prestwich: "There's much more a sense of urgency and threat than there was the first season. Before, it was the investigation of a murder that had happened. Now it's about killings that are happening.'

The producers spent considerable time studying documentaries of homeless teens, and also interviewed young hustlers and panhandlers.

Yorkin said "The Killing" will also explore the world of death row with a story line revolving around a convicted murderer (Peter Sarsgaard) whom Linden had arrested and who is scheduled to be executed in a few

The relationship between Linden and Holder will, of course, be a central element: "It takes them awhile to build back the trust with each other," said Yorkin.

Still, the series and AMC face uncertainty: Will enough viewers
