In other business, the county will discuss the burn ban, load limits on roads and a new Extension employee.

The commission meeting begins at 3:30 p.m. in the Commission Chambers of the Yankton County Government Center.

SD Mobile Election App Launches

PIERRE — South Dakota voters now have a new, free-to-download, mobile application to help prepare them for all upcoming elections. The Vote605 mobile app is part of a more digital user-friendly initiative set in place by Secretary of State Jason Gant.

"Vote605 is a comprehensive online voter tool with features to find out if they are registered to vote, map out their polling place, and view a sample of their ballot," said Gant.

Voters, who download the app, may also enter their name into the system to access personalized data such as: party affiliation, county of registration, and your ward and precinct information.

"The app is designed to provide a voter with information they need for verifying registration and viewing sample ballots for upcoming elections," said Gant.

Secretary Gant further explains that the Vote605 application will be particularly useful in the June primary, and the November general elections because polling places may change throughout the state.

"With the mapping function on Vote605 every voter will receive directions to their polling place," Gant said.

The newly re-designed Secretary of State website is also available with information optimized for smaller screens like tablets and smartphones.

The mobile application is now available, and free to download through the Google Play Store, and the iTunes App Store. For more information, contact the office of the South Dakota Secretary of State at (605) 773-3537 or visit www.sdsos.gov/.

Recycling More Convenient For Mount Marty College

Mount Marty College officials recently learned that the school will receive 40 recycling bins designed specifically for placement around campus as part of a national recycling bin grant made possible by Keep America Beautiful (KAB) and The Coca-Cola Foundation.

In its ninth year, the Coca-Cola/KAB Recycling Bin Grant Program is providing nearly 4,500 recycling bins to colleges and universities, nonprofits and local governments, with 35 percent of the total to be used by students in collegiate residence halls.

Mount Marty College Chief Operations Officer Greg Heine is thankful for the new recycling bins. "We are extremely grateful to Keep America Beautiful and The Coca-Cola foundation for these bins. We have a large area on this campus to ensure that all materials that are recyclable end up that way. With the education that is planned because of this award, and the ongoing awareness this will create, we are optimistic our efforts to increase recycling campus-wide will be successful."

Coca-Cola has expanded its investment in the bin grant program to include a specific focus on two-year community colleges, with 15 recycling bin grants going to two-year colleges and 28 grants going to traditional four-year colleges and universities.

At Mount Marty College, a plan will be implemented that not only focuses on the daily act of recycling, but will also include education outreach by Keep Yankton Beautiful.

"Through this program and our more than 50-year partnership with Keep America Beautiful, we are helping to ensure that communities understand the importance of recycling," said Lori George Billingsley, vice president, community relations, Coca-Cola North America. "Community recycling not only impacts the environment today, but it helps build sustainable communities for the future."

"By providing recycling bins to communities, organizations and universities, we can make a difference in increasing recycling in the U.S. and help overcome a main barrier of recycling — convenience," said Brenda Pulley, senior vice president, recycling, Keep America Beautiful. "We are truly grateful for Coca-Cola's continued support and commitment to recycling, and the Recycling Bin Grant Program."

Recipients were chosen by Keep America Beautiful based on criteria including the extent of their need, recycling experience and their ability to sustain the program in the future. Special outreach was made to colleges and universities through a partnership with the College and University Recycling Coalition (CURC), a membership organization serving campus recycling managers.

The Coca-Cola/KAB Recycling Bin Grant Program awards recycling bins directly to recipients and leverages volume buying discounts. Since 2007, the program has placed more than 35,000 recycling bins in over 500 communities across the U.S. A full list of the spring 2014 Recycling Bin Grant recipients and further information about the grant program is available at <http://bingrant.org>.
