'American Idol,' 'The Voice' Hit Sour Notes In The Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — A sharp decline in viewers for the season finales of "The Voice" and "American Idol" this week raises the question of whether music competition shows on television are fading out.

The year's final "American Idol" on Fox Wednesday was seen by fewer people than any Idol-crowning moment since the series began in 2002. "The Voice" has bypassed "American Idol" in changed, have evolved," said Brad Adgate, a TV analyst for Horizon Media. "There are ebbs and flows as to what is a popular programming genre or not and it seems like music competition shows have run their course. Particularly younger viewers are looking for what's next."

Fox has already cancelled Simon Cowell's "The X-Factor" for next year. The ratings slide for "American Idol," Wednesday's show, where North Carolina rocker Caleb Johnson became the season 13 champion, was seen by 10.1 million viewers, Nielsen said. The season finale reached 14.3 million people last year, 21.5 million in 2012 and 29.3 million in 2011. That's down 66 percent in three years.

This year's show had a 9 share among viewers aged 18-to-49, meaning 9 percent of viewers in that age group Fox has taken the show's downfall into account in scheduling, saying it will air fewer hours next season and in many weeks only one episode instead of two.

"Idol' is not going to come back to be the ratings champion it once was," said Kevin Reilly, Fox's entertainment chief. "But we believe the show can be on for many years to come."

"The Voice" decline is in some ways viewers. That's down from the 14 million who saw the conclusion of the last competition in December, and the 15.6 million who watched last spring.

million who watched last spring. Jeff Bader, NBC's top scheduling executive, said "The Voice" had stiffer competition this week than last year, when the season ended in June.

NBC has not changed its pattern for "The Voice" next season, expecting to air two episodes each week and sepa-popularity, yet Tuesday's season-ending episode was down 25 percent from the 2013 finale, the Nielsen company said Thursday.

"Perhaps the viewing tastes have this year with judges Jennifer Lopez, Keith Urban and Harry Connick Jr., has been well-documented but is particularly stark when looking at finales for the past few years. watching TV at the time were watching "Idol." The show's peak was in 2006, when 36.4 million people watched the finale, which had a 36 share among younger viewers.

more alarming, because it has been a linchpin in NBC's comeback since starting in 2011. Tuesday's finale, where Usher team member Josh Kaufman won the top prize, reached 11.7 million rate competitions in the fall and spring. Bader said he expects having Gwen Stefani and Pharrell replace Shakira and Cee Lo Green as judges will invigorate the show.

along with me" concept of the band's early days.

As time passed, the band gradually moved away from the spoof identity to become "A Bombastic Celebration of Arena Rock."

The Hairball playlist includes 30 to 40 rock stars, with the show moving seamlessly from one artist to another, Happy said. The act has added more singers, which provides more flexibility for the show.

"It used to be that we had to do the most elaborate costumes at the beginning of the show," he said. "While one guy was out there doing Ozzy, the other guy was getting ready for Alice Cooper or Twisted Sister. Now, with more singers, we have more time to change up the show."

The backstage wardrobe and make-up changes have become a smooth-running machine, Happy said.

"We have a pit crew with us," he said. "Somebody is always there with the wardrobe, laying out the boots and jacket. And we can adjust if we have any big production changes that require different outfits."

While getting wild and crazy, Hairball remains a family-friendly act for all-age venues such as Ribfest, Happy said. "It's a performance that we're giving. It's not Marilyn Manson shock rock," he said.

"Hairball is a very edgy rock show. You have that feeling that something is going down here. It's big and loud. It's fiery," he said. "There's no need for us to throw out vulgarity or profanity. I'm going to scare you with the fire on-stage, with my guitar. You're going to wonder what's going to happen next, what moves I'll make onstage, or I come off stage sometimes."

PLAYING WITH THE STARS

Hairball doesn't just impersonate some of the greatest rockers of all time — the band has played with them. Hairball performed as back-up band for two benefit shows last December in Las Vegas and Phoenix. The shows featured Alice Cooper, Tom Keifer of Cinderella, Dee Snider of Twisted Sister, Stephen Pearcy of Ratt, Jack Blades of Night Ranger, Vince Neil with Motley Crue, Kip Winger and others.

According to the Hairball website, Alice Cooper called them the "best cover band I have ever seen."

Hairball has also worked with Dee Snider for Camp Hometown Heroes, a free week-long overnight summer camp for children and younger siblings of fallen U.S. service members.

In addition, Hairball has worked with Chuck Brennan's Rock and Roll Academy in Sioux Falls. The state-of-the-art music facility allows young people to explore their musical talent and has brought rock icons to the academy.

"Chuck raised $1 million to keep his facility running and staffed," Happy said of the Las Vegas fundraiser for the Sioux Falls academy. "Two nights later, we were in Phoenix doing the same thing for Alice Cooper's Solid Rock Foundation."

tion." Happy said he has found it unbelievable to share the stage with some of the biggest names, who are also some of the most down-toearth people.

"That's why they're big (stars) and why Hairball does a cover show about them," he said.

Closer to home, Hairball plays the Sturgis motorcycle rally every year.

"It's a great stage and packed with a few thousand fans every night," he said of the Sturgis concerts. "Any time I can plug into a full show like that, it's a great day."

Hairball has also gone global with its music. Last September, the band played in London for the National Football League game between the Minnesota Vikings and Pittsburgh Steelers. The London gig came through Hairball's Minnesota connection and band members who are Vikings season ticket holders, Happy said. The band has also worked with Minneapolis sports radio station KFAN.

"We're just Minnesotans, and it made sense for us to go over (to London). It was a great chance to spend a week there," Happy said. "It was mainly to entertain our locals. A lot of big fans were coming over for the game, and we had all the local newscasters."

Hairball received unexpected celebrity treatment when they "crossed the pond."

"It was the first time that we were ever exposed to the red carpet," Happy said. "We went out for a cheeseburger around the corner, and when we came back, they were doing the big red carpet and there were 20 photographers welcoming us to London."

RELIVING AN ERA

Happy, a Minnesota native, joined Hairball about two years after it started and has been with the band for about 12 years. He was playing in an Atlanta band with professional wrestler Chris Jericho before returning to his home state.

"They were great musicians (in Atlanta), but it was really cool to get back to Minnesota," Happy said. "I didn't think I would come back and play other people's music again."

However, Hairball offers something different, Happy said.

"We celebrate all the things I think are cool," he said. "Sometimes, the line between audience and band is one of the thinnest lines. We all just come together and celebrate this type of showmanship that we call arena rock."

Hairball helps capture an important era, Happy said.

"With pre-Internet, there was the mystique that let you use your imagination when you opened up a "KISS Live 2" record or held that ticket for the concert coming in two months," he said. "Nowadays, you have YouTube and other sites. You don't have to wait to see them perform."

Hairball also brings back the social aspects of concerts, Happy said. "Rather than sitting on Facebook or staring at their phones and posting things, people would go to concerts and see live music. There were arena groups," he said. "Now, those groups are still touring and doing arenas. There are some very expensive (ticket prices), but they are still selling out."

Happy recalled attending his first concert, KISS, in 1978 when he was in middle school. His first records included Elton John, the Doobie Brothers and Boston. He was also a big Alice Cooper fan.

"There was a level of showmanship that I still don't think is outdone. When you think about Alice Cooper, back in the Billion Dollar Babies tour, he made a strong production statement, with as big and bold a theatrics as what happens with the modern shows. And look at what KISS has been doing," he said.

"Not that many (of today's artists) top it as far as overall assault on all of your senses. It's still the book that is being followed today, the only difference is just more technology. But they always try to make the modern recordings sound old, like vintage sounds."

Hairball also brings back the late artists such as Freddie Mercury of Queen, stirring memories for older audience members and providing an experience no longer available for younger fans. Happy points to the energy that arises from their concert scenes.

"Hairball gives you that feeling like when you were in high school and saw those groups," Happy said. "Hairball hits all cylinders and age groups. You have kids who are 12 years old and singing the words to 'Sweet Child O' Mine' (by Guns N' Roses) and having a good time with 'Rock and Roll All Night.""

Happy respectfully disagrees with some of today's artists when it comes to stage theatrics.

"Adele says music is for the ears and not for the eyes. Well, you have fun with that," he said. "At the end of the day, I like the crazy costumes. I like to see the fireworks go off. Where it's time to act first and think second, that's the Hairball show."

People of all walks of life - even the president of the United States — need to rock on and let loose, Happy said.

"Sooner or later, you go out and have a good time, dance and let it go," he said. "That's why there's Hairball. We're the right tool for the job, and it's important work."

It's also been widespread work, with Hairball logging 60,000 to 80,000 miles annually on the band's vehicles. And that doesn't include flights to Mexico, England and other venues.

"We started from the Midwest, and we really looked at taking it to the entire world," Happy said. "I think Hairball would be spectacular in Japan."

When it comes to honoring rock's greatest artists, Hairball will continue taking risks, Happy said.

"Hairball is where the rock band and theater kind of meet," he said. "We try to present what we feel are the most important characters in rock and roll history." Hairball will bring that same at-

Hairball will bring that same at titude when they play Yankton in two weeks, Happy said.

"We know how to have a good time and party," he said. "It's more than us. We're about the gathering, when a couple thousand people unite to have a good time, to remember or learn about some of the greatest rock and roll and showmanship in the planet's history."

Hairball takes to the Ribfest stage at 8:30 p.m. The rest of the free Ribfest musical line-up includes the Mitigators at noon, Mrs. Begley & The Boys at 2 p.m., the Austin Buescher Band at 4 p.m. and Go Figure at 6:30 p.m.
