

Yankton Physician Receives Prestigious Teaching Award

VERMILION — A physician at Avera Sacred Heart Hospital has been named as the recipient of a prestigious teaching award at the University of South Dakota (USD) Sanford School of Medicine.

Dr. Benjamin Aaker, Avera Medical Group Emergency Medicine Yankton, will receive the Anton Hyden Award during the USD Sanford School of Medicine Graduation Convocation held at Jeschke Auditorium in Sioux Falls at 5 p.m. Friday, May 8.

This is the top teaching honor for clinical faculty at the School of Medicine and is voted on by the medical students.

Aaker has been an assistant clinical professor for the School of Medicine for approximately three years.

"My work at Avera Sacred Heart Hospital has given me much more time to interact with and teach the medical students," he said. "I am very honored to have been selected for this award and am grateful for the opportunity that the University of South Dakota and Avera Sacred Heart Hospital have given me to be able to teach these excellent physicians in training. I wish them the best in their upcoming careers, and I am certain they will continue Dr. Hyden's legacy."

The purpose of the Anton Hyden

Memorial Award is to perpetuate the memory and high regard in which Dr. Anton Hyden was held in his field of Urology, as a physician and surgeon, a teacher, and a person. It is awarded to a School of Medicine professor selected by the membership of the junior and senior classes who has inspired and helped them the most during their final two years in medical school.

Dr. Hyden was an urologist in Sioux Falls until his death in 1961.

Past recipients of the Anton Hyden award include 2014 winner Melissa K. Johnson, MD; and 2013 winner Byron S. Nielsen, MD, who specializes in internal medicine and nephrology at the Yankton Medical Clinic, P.C., and is the chief of medical staff at Avera Sacred Heart Hospital.

May Is Foster Parent Appreciation, Awareness Month

PIERRE — In honor of foster parents across the state of South Dakota, Gov. Dennis Daugaard has declared May as Foster Parent Appreciation and Awareness Month.

Each month, there are approximately 1,000 children and youth in foster care from public, private and tribal agencies in South Dakota. The South Dakota Department of Social Services encourages families to open their homes and hearts, and commit to know more about becoming foster parents.

"Foster parents provide the care and support children need to feel safe and secure while their families work through difficult situations," said State Department of Social Services Secretary Lynne Valenti.

Communities across the state are seeking more foster families to meet the needs of children and youth of all ages, with a greater need for families who will support and care for teenagers, sibling groups and medically fragile children. There is also a need for Native American families who can care for children who are Native American.

"It's important that children have the opportunity to stay connected with their family, friends, culture, tribe, school and community," said Secretary Valenti. "Foster families play an important role in making that happen."

Foster homes allow youth to live together with brothers and sisters, remain in their own neighborhoods and stay in their schools. Children and youth in foster care need licensed foster families to provide them with the strength and stability it takes to be successful adults.

"Foster Parent Appreciation and Awareness Month allows us to recognize the incredible foster families who make a difference in the lives of children in South Dakota," said Virgena Wieseler, director of the Division of Child Protection Services. "Foster parenting is a significant and rewarding opportunity, and the Department of Social Services encourages families to consider becoming a foster family."

To learn more about becoming a foster parent, visit www.FosterOneSD.org or call the Department of Social Services at 605-773-3227.
