SPEAKING OUT

Local Economy And Youth Football Program Benefit From Yankton Chamber Fundraiser

$15,000 in Chamber Dollars was awarded to 11 lucky winners and more than $10,000 was raised to support the Shop Local campaign for the holidays and Sertoma Youth Football.

Ten individuals and one nonprofit group from the Yankton area went home with a nice preholiday gift, when their winning tickets were drawn Friday, Oct. 28, at the second Annual "Tailgate Party." The winners were announced during the dance held at Minervas Grill & Bar. The drawing was the culmination of a five-week fundraising campaign to support the Sertoma Junior Football program and the Yankton Area Chamber of Commerce's Shop Local campaign.

The purpose behind the raffle was to raise money to benefit a local youth organization and raise the awareness of the impact of shopping locally. The Chamber will take its portion raised and put it directly back into the community for the holiday season by distributing Chamber Dollars.

CLEANING UP

After working for SAPA in Chicago and Yankton for 35 years, Dave Abbott has retired and now devotes his time to volunteering for the Yankton community. Abbott has recently been awarded for his volunteerism and named the September Volunteer of the Month by the United Way & Volunteer Services (UWVS).

After retiring in 2004, Abbott enjoys playing golf and doing yard work at his home. Abbott is married to Karen Abbott. They have two sons.

Abbott said he began volunteering when his wife worked at the Women's Shelter and the Family Visitation Center. "My wife was the executive director and I started volunteering by taking care of the buildings, cutting the grass and taking care of the household donations," Abbott said. "I was the handy man around there.'

Abbott said after he retired, he started volunteering for UWVS.

"I help by doing things like putting up their thermometer sign every year and taking it down," Abbott said. "Once in a while, I would help people haul furniture. I helped with anything from fixing the way the door switch operates from hauling stuff around town for them."

Abbott said he has also been involved with Adopt a Highway along Highway 52, me. Abbott said there is a need for volunteering in the community of Yankton.

"A lot of places could use money, for one thing," Abbott said. "For the people who can't afford to give money, time is just as valuable as money. If you go to the United Way or places like that and just ask anybody, there's always something they need done. Everybody has the ability to do something even if it's nothing other than delivering Meals on Wheels or running errands for organizations

everybody can do something."
Abbott said volunteering in Yankton is his way of giving back. "I used to live in Chicago. There, a lot of the people need a lot of stuff," Abbott said. "When I came (to South Dakota), I decided once I retired, it was time to start giving back. I've had a nice life out here. It's a good place to live and the people are friendly. I decided that I have the time on my hands so I might as well give back a little bit.'

"I don't think a lot of people think about donating their time or volunteering until they retire. In a lot of cases, people probably don't have time until they retire," Abbott said. "One good area to look at is the retired people, not necessarily the people in their eighties and nineties, but the people in their sixties and seventies — they still have a lot of ability to help people.³

Abbott also said that it would be great for kids to get involved by volunteering.

"If there are some young kids who could volunteer on weekends — The Center is always looking for people to help with some-thing," Abbott said. "The UWVS is always looking for somebody to do something, and even if it's going around to keep the community clean to help out, young kids can learn a lot from volunteer services.

The Plant-Horticultural Search-Service has spent the last two months cleaning-up the banks of Marne Creek from the mouth of the Missouri River to the bridge at Highway 50 near the Yankton Area Chamber of Commerce building. When they had difficulty getting to all the trash in the exposed riverbed and rocky banks under the bridge, Mt. Marty students stepped in to help. Pictured above are: Kelsey Thury, Reilly Biel, Jennifer Duff and Lauren Heyden, who volunteered their time last Friday afternoon to help the Plant-Horticulture Search-Service and Keep Yankton Beautiful in getting the unsightly litter cleaned up. TOASTMASTERS CLUB 6217

Toastmaster Eileen O'Connor used the word of the day that Grammarian Jane Miller introduced, "exodus", as did other members of Toastmasters Club 6217 during their Nov. 3 meeting in the Benedictine Center.

Gale Vogt was the main speaker and received critiques from Evaluator MJ Rogers. Vogt's speech, entitled "Bad for Yankton," was a researched informational presentation about changes to the Yankton community. Rogers praised Vogt for not taking information at face value but backing his opinion with documented facts. Vogt and Rogers received the Best Speaker and Best Evaluator awards, respectively. O'Connor counted the votes to assist General Evaluator Muriel Stach's evaluation team. The rest of the team included Eric Taylor using the stop watch and Jennifer Wubben tracking the speakers' unneeded "ums."

Impromptu questions were chosen Tim Bohn. He asked Miller to choose any house from the "movies' that Miller would like to own. She picked the "Home Alone" house. Then Bohn asked Rogers to pick a pen name that he'd use if he was a novelist. Rogers said that it would be some variation on "bow and arrow". MJ and Miller tied for Best Table Topics Respondents. The next week's schedule was announced prior to the meeting's adjournment.
