the target of the emails was Kelley, but said there was no affair between the two, speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss the retired general's private life. The associate, who has been in touch with Petraeus since his resignation, says Kelley and her husband were longtime friends of Petraeus and wife, Holly.

Attempts to reach Kelley were not immediately successful. Broadwell did not return phone calls or emails.

Petraeus resigned while lawmakers still had questions about the Sept. 11 attack on the U.S. Consulate and CIA base in Benghazi, Libya, that killed four Americans, including U.S. Ambassador Chris Stevens. Lawmakers said it's possible that Petraeus will still be asked to appear on Capitol Hill to testify about what he knew about the U.S. response to that incident.

Rep. Peter King, chairman of the House Homeland Security Committee, said the circumstances of the FBI probe smacked of a cover-up by the White House.

"It seems this (the investigation) has been going on for several months and, yet, now it appears that they're saying that the FBI didn't realize until Election Day that General Petraeus was involved. It just doesn't add up," said King, R-N.Y.

Petraeus, 60, quit Friday after acknowledging an extramarital relationship. He has been married 38 years to Holly Petraeus, with whom he has two adult children, including a son who led an infantry platoon in Afghanistan as an Army lieutenant.

Broadwell, a 40-year-old graduate of the U.S. Military Academy and an Army Reserve officer, is married with two young sons.

Petraeus' affair with Broadwell will be the subject of meetings Wednesday involving congressional intelligence committee leaders, FBI deputy director Sean Joyce and CIA deputy director Michael Morell.

Petraeus had been scheduled to appear before the committees on Thursday to testify on the attack in Benghazi. Republicans and some Democrats have questioned the U.S. response and protection of diplomats stationed overseas.

Morell was expected to testify in place of Petraeus, and lawmakers said he should have the answers to their questions. But Feinstein and others didn't rule out the possibility that Congress will compel Petraeus to testify about Benghazi at a later date, even though he's relinquished his job.

Christmas Child exceeded its goal of 1,450 boxes by filling 1,575.

This year the target goal is 1,700, which Herron said could be well within reach.

"We have a lot of space over here, so hopefully that means we can fill more boxes," she said. Such an increase means the group seeks volunteers and others to provide items, she added.

Calvary Baptist has served as a relay center for regional churches and other groups for nearly 15 years. The boxes collected at the church go to the collection center in Sioux Falls, and from there they go to the 5-state processing center in Minneapolis, Minn.

This year, Operation Christmas Child is holding a special tour for its 100 millionth shoe box packed and distributed since 1993. A special Facebook page (search Operation Christmas Child) allows people to track the box's travels across 12 cities in the United States from Nov. 8-Dec. 5.

At each stop, a special item is added to the box, which will reach its final destination in the Dominican Republic next month.

Anyone interested in following their own box, however, can track it by printing out a special label, co-coordinator Sue Kleinsasser said.

"Once it's done, you can watch where it goes, to see what country it ends up at," she said. "That's pretty neat, to have that kind of connection with you put inside to where it finally stops."

PTSD

"We want them to come forward, get the help they need and continue to be valued members of our organization."

The military has emphasized helping its members deal with their mental needs, Deiss said.

"Our number one priority in the SDNG is taking care of soldiers and airmen and their families, and making sure we are doing what we can to ensure our service members are getting the help they might need with any emotional issues is very important," he said.

Resources are available for service members struggling with thoughts of suicide, depression or mental health issues, Deiss said. Those resources include chaplains, military and family life consultants and mental health professionals.

"We also have a State Suicide Prevention Program Manager and Transition Assistance Advisor to assist service members returning from deployment, not to mention a number of support help lines that service members receive," he said.

The SDNG has made the suicide issue part of its formal program, Deiss said.

"In recent years, the Guard was required to have at least one hour of suicide awareness and prevention training during the training year," he said.

"Over the next several months, we are having a suicide stand down, where Guard units will complete a total of eight hours of suicide awareness and prevention training and briefings."

BACK TO SCHOOL

The issue of suicide, depression and mental health is not limited to current military members.

The University of South Dakota, like other colleges, offers services for student veterans facing the double challenge of transitioning to civilian life and to a campus atmosphere.

Bruce Kelley and Justin Smith, with the USD Center for Teaching and Learning, are co-authoring a book on preparing a campus to assist veteran students. The book is coming out next year through Stylus publishing.

They note the results of a recent national study of student veterans (Rudd, Goulding & Bryan, 2011) that explored the psychological symptoms, symptom severity and suicide risk of these veteran students. What researchers found, in the words of the author, "was alarming":

- 24 percent of the sample experienced "severe depression";
- 35 percent of the sample experienced "severe anxiety";
- 46 percent experienced significant symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder;
- 7.7 percent have made an attempt to take their own life;
- 46 percent of the sample reported thinking about suicide.

At USD, Smith wants military veterans to know they have a friend on campus. Veterans comprise about 450 of the 10,000 students on the Vermillion campus, he said.

Smith serves as project director for the federal Fides (Latin for "promise") grant that assists veterans transitioning to campus.

"It's about communication, about reaching out and helping them tell their story, he said.

But that's not always easy for either the veterans or those around them, he said.

"Just last week, one of my students came into my office and said, 'I'm not telling my story. I've walled off that part of my life,'" he said.

As the conversation continued, Smith learned the student had actually shared his combat experiences with someone and was upset at the reaction.

"The other person had said, 'I completely understand where you are coming from,' because they were both veterans," Smith said. "But my student didn't think the other person could understand because they had been in completely different places."

Smith sees the experience as a valuable teaching moment.

"Hopefully, even though people don't share those same experiences, they have the capacity to empathize and imagine what the veteran is going through," he said. "But one piece of advice that I would give family and friends: drop the assumptions. Try to ask questions that don't carry a lot of assumptions that 'it must be like that.'"

Many veterans may find it difficult to talk about their experiences, but it's not a taboo topic, Smith said.

"I don't think veterans want to be treated with kid gloves.

You can talk about (combat) if there is a way it comes up naturally," he said. "Most veterans believe they were just doing their job. They don't want to be put on a pedestal. They need a space where they can feel free to be themselves."

A NEW HOME FOR HELP

At USD, veterans are finding a new home for dealing with the transition home.

The Student Veterans Resource Center (SVRC) will celebrate its grand opening Tuesday. An open house runs from 1:30-3:30 p.m., with USD President Jim Abbott offering remarks at the 2 p.m. ribbon cutting ceremony.

The facility is located at the Temporary Student Center 117D on the USD campus.

"This is a great resource for our student veterans and for students attending USD who are still active in the military, as well as their families," noted Jason R. Dean, USD veterans coordinator. "The Student Veterans Resource Center represents USD's commitment to our student veterans and

A personal connection like that, albeit thousands of miles away, has already provided feedback from the child who receives the box. Herron said there was a Yankton girl who shipped a box while in sixth grade, and six years later received a letter back.

"It's a way for people to help kids in third world countries," Herron said. "A lot of people will never get the chance to travel to these places, but this is a way to show God's love."

Those interested in providing items for a shoe box can stop by Calvary Baptist Church at 2407 Broadway in Yankton to find out more information about Operation Christmas Child or to pick up a decorated box. Items such as school supplies and toys are the most popular, Herron said. Among the items the group asks people not to donate are toy guns or knives, anything with a liquid inside, chocolate and medications or vitamins.

Personal letters are also welcomed, and Herron asked that a copy be provided to the group so it can document responses in a scrapbook.

"That's all we want to do, is help," Heron said. "This is a way for us to introduce Jesus and his message to kids all across the country."

Calvary Baptist will be packing the boxes from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. today (Monday), Tuesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, as well as 9 a.m.-8 p.m. on Wednesday. The site will again be open on Saturday from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. and Sunday from 9 a.m.-3 p.m.

provides them with a location necessary for academic and personal growth."

Resources provided by the office include benefits assistance, study space and a setting for veterans to share their military experience with other students on campus.

The center provides an important area for social support, Smith said.

"(Veterans feel) this disconnect from other college students, many of them 18 or 19 years old, who have different priorities in life," he said. "The veterans are not only chronologically older, but they also have a different maturity and life experiences when they come back from the service. They may be very career focused, and sometimes they are raising a family."

The opening of the SVRC will offer one more outreach on campus, aid Brendan Whalen, president of the USD Veterans Club.

"Each branch of the military has their own transition assistance class that is mandatory to attend before separating from service," he said. "There are also resources through the VA such as the Vet Center which help with counseling and transitional services."

Other resources include the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW), American Legion, Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America (IAVA), and Disabled American Veterans (DAV). The Student Veterans of America (SVA) lobbies on behalf of educational benefits and can assist with help needed in navigating the Post 9/11 GI Bill.

In South Dakota, callers facing a crisis can dial 211 from any phone for a help line and talk with a person on the other end, Whalen said.

"Most important in combating suicide and PTSD is building a strong network of friends and family to support any veteran battling these crippling diseases," he said. "This is one of the main goals of the USD Veterans Club: to provide a strong and immediate support network for all members who are facing any crisis."

REACHING OUT

Smith recommended talking about veterans as everyday persons — fellow human beings who have faced extraordinary circumstances.

"My experience in teaching a veteran-only class at USD is that though they may be quietly proud of the service to our country, they often struggle against public perception that characterizes them in a negative light," he said. "Presenting them as a hero or someone to be pitied misses the mark and sets up more barriers to rejoining their community. First and foremost, we must present them in way we would want to be presented, in a way that invites connection, not being set apart because of their line of work."

"I think a key to preventing more military suicides is creating spaces in our community where they feel they can share their story and believe someone else can empathize with their experience," he added.

That means building a relationship, which carries risks, Smith said. "A big key for any relationship is building trust over time, meaning you do what you say and say what you do," he said.

Veterans and active military members need to know they have support, Smith said.

"We want them to know, you're not alone," he said. "There are people in your life that care and want to know what you need."
