CIV. 12-372

DEFAULT JUDGMENT

CITY OF YANKTON,
a South Dakota Municipal Corporation,

Plaintiff,

ROSALYNN T. WHITE,
Defendant.

On the 16th day of October, 2012, before the Court was a Motion to Take Default Judgment supported by an Affidavit (of David M.

2010 Legal and Public Notices
Hosmer) in Support of Motion to Take Default Judgment; and it appearing that the Defendant was served a copy of the Amended Summons by way of publication on August 1, 2012, as evidenced by the Affidavit of Publication; and it appearing that more than thirty (30) days elapsed since service of said Amended Summons; and the Court finds that the Defendant is in default as she has failed to file an answer within the required period of time; and based upon the Complaint and the Plaintiff's Motion to Take Default Judgment, the Court finds (a) that the Defendant owns the following real property:

Lot Nine (9), except the South Six Feet (S6'), and the South Seven Feet (S7') of Lot Ten (10), Block Fifty-Five (55), Lower Yankton City and County of Yankton, South Dakota.

otherwise known as 811 Picotte (hereinafter the "real property") and (2) that, pursuant to City of Yankton Ordinance 7-59 and SDCL 21-20-1, the "real property" constitutes a dangerous and/or abandoned building and a nuisance; the Court finds sufficient cause to do so, and it is hereby ORDERED that the Plaintiff's Motion to Take Default Judgment is granted; and it is further

ORDERED that the Plaintiff's Motion to Publish Judgment, in lieu of service, is granted, as this is an action regarding real property in Yankton County; and it is further ORDERED that, pursuant to SDCL 15-9-18, the Plaintiff shall be permitted to publish the Default Judgment in this action in lieu of personal service upon Rosalynn T. White; and it is further

ORDERED that, pursuant to SDCL 15-9-17, service by publication of the Default Judgment must be made in a newspaper printed in Yankton county, where the premises or some part thereof are situated, once a week for four successive weeks; and it is furtherd

ORDERED that, pursuant to SDCL 15-9-19, a copy of the Default Judgment in this action shall be forthwith sent by first class mail, directed to Rosalynn T. White, to her last known post office address; and it is further

ORDERED that the service of the Default Judgment by publication shall be deemed complete upon the last publication thereof as ordered by this court and the time in which the Defendant shall have to appeal shall commence to run the day next following such last publication; and it is further

ORDERED that the Defendant, pursuant to City of Yankton Ordinance Sec. 10-6, shall within thirty (30) days after service of this Judgment upon her remove all solid waste, garbage, household waste, rubble and yard waste, as those terms are defined in City Ordinance Sec. 10-1, (hereinafter "impermissible personal property") on his "rea property"; and it is further

ORDERED that should the Defendant fail to remove the "impermissible personal property" from her "real property" within the time period allotted by the Court, then the Plaintiff is authorized to enter on the Defendant's "real property" and to remove the "impermissible personal property"; and it is further

ORDERED that the Defendant, pursuant to City of Yankton Ordinance Sec. 7-59, shall within thirty (30) days after service of this Judgment upon her repair all of the conditions and defects to the real property thereby eliminating any danger to immediate life, health or safety or its occupants, as interpreted by Joe Morrow, City Building Official; and it is further

ORDERED that should the Defendant fail to remove the repair all of the conditions and defects to the real property, then the Plaintiff is authorized to enter on the Defendant's "real property" and to abate the nuisance and/or to repair the conditions and defects to the real property thereby eliminating any danger to immediate life, health or safety or its occupants, as interpreted by Joe Morrow, City Building Official; and it is further

ORDERED that any personal property, other than solid waste, rubble, yard waste, garbage, etc. defined in City of Yankton Ordinance 10-1, removed from the Defendant's "real property" by the Plaintiff shall be itemized shall be stored by the Plaintiff for thirty (30) days after the date upon which it was removed; that the Defendant shall pay reasonable storage fees for the same; and notice of said detained personal property shall be provided to the Defendant, which may also be published in the same manner as the Default Judgment as set forth herein, who shall have thirty (30) days after receipt thereof to object thereto; and it is further

ORDERED that if the Defendant does not claim the personal property from her "real property" and pay for the storage of the same within the thirty (30) day objection period, then the Plaintiff may destroy the same; and it is further

ORDERED that any damages incurred by the Plaintiff in abating the nuisance and/or repairing the "real property" shall be itemized in a verified statement by the Plaintiff within thirty (30) days after incurring said damages; and a copy of the same shall be served upon the Defendant, in the same manner as the publication of the Default Judgment as set forth herein, who shall have thirty (30) days after receipt thereof to object thereto; and it is further ORDERED that any damage incurred by the Plaintiff which the Defendant does not object to shall constitute a Judgment in favor of the Plaintiff and against the Defendant from the date upon which the Verified Statement is filed at the Yankton County Clerk of Court's Office.

of adding things to keep it fresh and have new scenes so people would come back each year," he said.

Previously working with Fahr provided a major benefit in creating this year's Living Nativity, Eisenhower said. "Since I have been involved from the beginning, it was easy for me to sequence the scenes that pastor created. I just took the scripts from former years and cut-and-paste them together in time sequence," the parishioner said.

"It started as just the Christmas story, but two years ago we added Christ's crucifixion and return from the grave to complete the story of why God sent his Son to redeem us from our sins.

The program changed every year, Nielsen said. Later pageants incorporated various Biblical scenes, starting with Adam and Eve's original sin in the Garden of Eden.

"Pastor Fahr did change it every year," she said. "He would pick a very moving song that carried a really significant message, and he would build the Live Nativity Scene around that song. He did bring in different scenes, and there were different aspects every year."

FALLING INTO PLACE

The cast contains about 40 members, including the narrators and singers. Other persons work behind the scenes as stage, lighting and sound crews.

"We have the narration, lots of music and people in costumes," she said. "Mary, Joseph and the baby have changed over the years. We have lucked perience that I'll be able to represent South Dakota in the Miss USA pageant."

In order to qualify to compete in the Miss South Dakota pageant, contestants must submit a photo and resume, and directors select contestants from throughout the state for the preliminary round. Once contestants get picked at that level, they represent their hometown in the pageant.

This year, there were 16 women in the competition. Winners are announced in descending order, and whoever's name is not called is crowned as Miss South Dakota.

"I've been in the top five quite a few times and you never want to hear your name called," Albers said. "I was ready to age out of the system, so this was the last year I could ever compete in Miss South Dakota or Miss USA. I was more excited about just being on stage and having the support I've had throughout the years. I didn't think I would win — my competition was the best I've ever seen it at the state level."

She added that South Dakota hasn't fared well in the national contest — the last time someone placed in the top 15 at Miss USA from South Dakota was in 1974.

After she was announced as the winner, she said she had hundreds of girls behind her, proud of her and wanting hugs.

"I represent every single girl that was on stage fighting for the title that I won," Albers said. "When I go out in public, I think of the people I represent in South Dakota that were on that stage, too. The girls there were all so happy for me, and I felt as if I had met so many friends."

Albers has high aspirations for Miss USA. The date and location of the 2013 pageant is to be announced.

"I really hope I can place in the top 15 at Miss USA, though I would really like to win it," Albers said. "People in the state might not know the importance of this, but it's a huge deal and people all over the world watch it."

Miss USA is the second most watched program in the world, next to the Olympics.

Albers said she has always been a role model and someone girls have to look up to.

"I really feel as if I've always been a role model, and I think that's one of the reasons the judges may have picked me to be Miss South Dakota," Albers said.

She hopes she can exemplify what and who Miss South Dakota should be and how she should act.

"People underestimate the power of themselves all the time," Albers added. "All these years I've been in the system and the top five, but I don't need the title to be able to change people's lives. It's just an honor to get that title, if you're able to. However, now that I have the title of Miss South Dakota, I have more people looking up to me, so I need to watch what I do and understand I have more people looking up to me, watching me and wanting to be like me."

She said if she won the Miss USA Crown, it would bring attention to South Dakota and to Yankton.

"If I win I really hope Yankton County throws a huge party and thinks this is the next biggest thing since Tom Brokaw," she said.

Albers has faced adversity while fighting for her goals. "I grew up in Walnut Creek, Calif. My parents divorced when I was 12, and my mom chose not to be a part of the family anymore, so my dad moved us to Yankton because he grew up in Fordyce," she said. "My dad just thought Yankton was the perfect town to raise two young girls."

She has a sister, Nicole, who is 24 and works for BNSF.

"My dad brought us back here and raised us on his own," Albers said. "I didn't have a mom to teach me how to do makeup. My dad, God bless his heart, really tried hard to have his girls be important to him and said, 'If you want to do pageants, then we'll learn how to do makeup.' So we were on the Internet learning how to put on makeup and how to walk, talk and dress in order to be in pageants."

She said it's hard for a girl to grow up without a mother to look up to, rely on and tell all her secrets to.

"My dad had to be a stern father who didn't allow boyfriends, but also the kind and compassionate mother who showed you how to put makeup on and deal with feminine issues," Albers said. "He became the most important person in my life."

She added that she had to look to friends' mothers for advice, but had amazing friends in high school to help her through everything she was going through.

After graduating from Yankton High School in 2004, Albers said she felt as if her closest friends and role models in high school were all moving away.

"I had finally felt like I made a home, even though it took me a few years to feel like this was home and a place I could come back to and rely on people here," Albers said. "I wanted to stay here for college, so I went to Mount Marty."

out, because we have a family each year that just had a baby (and who portray the Holy Family)."

Fahr's children and grandchildren have participated in past programs and plan on playing parts in Sunday's pageant, Nielsen said. Fahr served as interim pastor for a time at Golgotha Lutheran Church of rural Bloomfield, and those parishioners have taken part in the Living Nativity.

The cast also includes four-legged creatures, taking advantage of the arena, Nielsen said.

"We don't have a camel, but we have three Wise Men riding horses. One year, we had a cow," she said. "We also have sheep. Last year, the sheep jumped through the fence, and the kids loved it."

Such an unconventional venture somewhat reflected Fahr's untraditional path to the pulpit.

Fahr grew up in Iowa and farmed before entering the ministry, Nielsen said.

"This was his second career," the secretary said. "He celebrated 20 years in the ministry about a year ago. He was pastor here for nine years and had been in other small churches in Nebraska before he came to us."

Congregation members showed their dedication in quickly assembling the set Monday night. One parishioner noted the set-up, which formerly took three nights, now takes only about two hours.

The men carefully hoisted the cross, containing different lights, into place. A staging area houses the manger, which remains the focus of the pageant. Once the performance starts, the lights are doused and a spotlight will focus attention on certain areas. A lit star will dangle over the manger.

Bleachers were hauled in place for the audience. A Yankton business will record the program, with DVDs created for those wanting a copy.

With the scenery in place, parish-ioners reflected on the special meaning of performing this year's Living Nativity. They recalled Fahr's passion and joy in producing each year's version.

Mark Stelling said there seemed to be little doubt of the need to go forward with the program.

"Everybody agreed it was a fitting tribute, because the Living Nativity was (Fahr's) idea," he said. "His family has been involved, and we think it was a highlight for him every year."

"Pastor puffed up (with pride) when he watched his grandchildren," another man added.

Leland Freeman noted the minister's insistence on opening up the production to the surrounding area at no charge.

"(Fahr) didn't even take a freewill offering," Freeman said. "A lot of people wanted to donate, but he said this was a gift to the community."

Each year's Living Nativity brought changes but kept the central message, said Rod Repenning. "You may have seen it many times, but it's a reminder of what God has done for us," he said.

Sunday's performance may be the last one, but the future remains uncertain, Eisenhower said.

"At this time, there is no intention of continuing the performance in future years," he said. "Hopefully, we will have a new pastor by next Christmas season. It is our feeling it would not be fair to a new pastor to keep Pastor Fahr's programs intact under his leadership.

"However, if our new pastor wishes to continue this blessing to the community, the congregation would be happy to support his wishes."

Albers started out as pre-med at MMC, but eventually switched to business administration.

She said being involved in pageants has "changed my life. They have made me more open, a better communicator and a much more confident person in who I am. It takes a lot of confidence to get on stage in front of thousands of people, wearing a bathing suit and make-up and acting like you're just at the beach."

She added that every woman that competes in pageants becomes more confident and calmer knowing that if they have the guts to enter a pageant, they can do anything they want.

"When I won Miss South Dakota, I was so happy my dreams finally came true," Albers said. "When they announced who the winner was, I didn't see my family, but I would have liked to have seen a photo of them — it probably would have been the best photo I've ever had."

She said she is looking forward to representing Yankton and the entire state in Miss USA.

"It really means everything to me to be able to represent Yankton in Miss USA," Albers said. "I wouldn't have worked for 10 years to be where I'm at if I didn't love my county and stayed here to represent it. I could have moved to a bigger state or lived in Nebraska, but I chose to stay here to represent Yankton."
