Arlington Beats Andes Central In Class B Day One Action

BY VANCE JANAK

MITCHELL — Andes Central coach Rocky Brinkman turned away from the Corn Palace court.

With his Eagles trailing Arlington and struggling to slow down the Cardinals' multiple hitters in their quarterfinal match of the Class B state volleyball tournament on Thursday afternoon, Brinkman told team members on the bench in a quiet tone that "we can't get on the block."

What Brinkman said came at a time when Andes Central was having its toughest time stopping Arlington's hitters. The Cardinals had scored their last six points, including three straight, via kills, and were on their way to bouncing the Eagles to the consolation bracket.

Even though Andes Central recorded nine solo blocks and eight block assists, Arlington hitters Samantha Boeck, Brooke Hennrich and Jadyn Christensen led an offensive attack that recorded 54 kills, providing the punch that powered the fifth-seeded Cardinals to the semifinals with a 3-1 victory.

"They were hitting right through us," Brinkman said after the 19-25, 25-12, 25-22, 25-15 setback that puts the fourth-seeded Eagles (29-4) in today's noon consolation semifinal against No. 8 Lyman (16-13). "We weren't covering the line. Then we weren't getting far enough over, and then they were hitting right between us. Another thing, too, is they are a good ball club. They mix it up really well.

Arlington's first offensive priority was setting Boeck. The 5-foot-11 middle hitter who came into the tournament with a teamleading 580 kills recorded a match-high 23 kills Thursday. When setter Brett Heuer (51 assists and five kills) wasn't going to the Cardinals' top hitter, outside hitters Hennrich and Christensen did their part by adding 13 and eight kills, respectively.

'That was something that we wanted to be able to do was use the whole net," Arlington coach Anita Boeck said. "Our hitters did a nice job coming through."

son.

"We were a little too predictable, I thought. We kept hitting to the middle, setting to the middle all the time," Brinkman said. "And then they were keying on that. Then when we tried to go outside, the comfort level wasn't there.'

Andes Central played well in the first set. The Eagles answered each of the Cardinals' runs before scoring the final four points of the set (Kellie Winckler kills, Arlington hit error, Winckler block, Arlington lift) to win the set 25-19.

The Eagles came out sluggish in the second set, falling behind 10-3. After closing to within 12-8, thoughts of a comeback disappeared once the deficit grew to 20-10.

The third set was the most competitive. Andes Central scored four straight points on a pair of kills by Kellie Winckler

SDSU Wrestling Lands Top Recruiting Class

 South Dakota State head BROOKINGS wrestling coach Chris Bono and assistant coaches Israel Silva and Andrew Sorenson announced Thursday the signing of the sixth-best recruiting class in the nation (The Open Mat, Amateur Wrestling News).

Eight student-athletes joined the Jackrabbit wrestling team on signing day, including three ranked by Amateur Wrestling News. and two of Hayli Gray's four kills to go up 22-21. But Arlington gained a pivotal 2-1 lead in the match after a kill by Boeck, a Josie Parry ace and another Boeck kill.

"A couple breaks in that third one, we would have been up 2-1 instead of down 1-2," Brinkman said. "It's just a matter of the breaks and we just didn't get them tonight.'

Arlington never trailed in the fourth set, giving the Cardinals eighth straight victories in the quarterfinals. The Eagles look to bounce back by winning their second consolation championship.

"The girls said in the huddle that they aren't down, they aren't disappointed in the way they played," Brinkman said. "... They said they're going to win the next two matches. They seem pretty comfortable with it and so do I."

> The No. 6 ranking makes it the best recruiting class for any sport in the history of Jackrabbit athletics.

SDSU Men's Golf Adds Three

BROOKINGS - South Dakota State head golf coach Jared Baszler announced Thursday that the men's golf team has added three student athletes, all signing national letters of intent, with plans to enroll at South Dakota State and compete for the Jackrabbits on the course in the fall of 2013.

The new golfers include: Ian Rinken (Sioux Falls Washington), Trevor Tobin (Brandon Valley) and Grant Smith (Johnston, Iowa).

We couldn't be more proud and excited about the three men in our 2013 class. This was a critical recruiting class, as we will be graduating three important seniors in the spring. We are confident this class will come in right away and fill some big shoes for us."

Doom ace serve — to take the set.

"They were just hitting some good shots down the line, and we had to get our defense to the corners," Tyler said. 'We did a good job of that in sets two and three. That's what we did to pick up momentum.'

The teams went toe to toe in the third set until Dakota Valley got on a roll. Martin had a kill and two ace serves, and Morganne Pfaffle had two of her six kills as the Panthers turned a 16-14 deficit into a 25-18 win in a rally that turned the momentum of the match.

A late surge by Dakota Vallev in the fourth set sealed the victory. Trailing 15-14, the Panthers got a block and two kills from Bergmann, as well as two ace serves from Funck to close out the victory.

Besides the heavy hitting by Bergmann, Martin and Johnson, the Panthers got timely attacks from Smith. The sophomore setter finished with five kills and first set put Parker up 9-2. The Pheasants ended their openingset victory by outscoring the Raiders 12-3.

Parker had its largest run of 11 straight points — with Weeldreyer delivering three ace serves during that span — in a dominant second set. That was followed by a second spurt of seven straight points to build a commanding 21-3 advantage before winning the set 25-7.

"We knew it was going to be a challenge," Whalen said. "Parker is obviously a very good team and they played very well. It was fun to see that type of team. We haven't played really, really tough competition in a while. It was fun to come here and test our team and test the waters. It was a pretty much a shock for our girls coming in."

The third set was the closest as Christensen rotated in reserves. Regardless of who was on the floor, the Pheasants were in control. Junior Morgan Hay served up three aces during Parker's 6-0 run to push the lead to 18-8. Many of the Pheasants' second-string players were on the floor to finish the match.

"It was solid. It wasn't anything spectacular but it was workmanlike," Christensen said. "We got the job done where we needed to. We took care of business.

Senior forward Alyssa Whetham used two quick three pointers to bring the Lancers within four points.

Saint Mary's, however, worked Mount Marty all around the court and forced them out of their comfort zone, the full court trap. Starting all five guards proved to be too much for the post players to contain in the contest.

We had to be able to defend all five of their guards," Schlimgen said. "We tried attacking (their guards) inside, but we just couldn't score."

Both teams used great ball movement within their offense to find shots to sink.

The key for the Flames was the quality play of their bench, coming out and playing good minutes.
