Small Business Saturday Planned In Yankton

The Yankton Chamber has announced its endorsement and participation in the third annual Small Business Saturday on Nov. 24. Small Business Saturday, which falls between Black Friday and Cyber Monday, is a day to support the local businesses that create jobs, boost the economy and preserve neighborhoods around the country. American Express created Small Business Saturday in 2010 in response to small business owners' most pressing need: more demand for their products and services.

Through a new partnership, American Express and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce offered an exclusive opportunity for member Chambers to bring Small Business Saturday to their communities. The first 100 member Chambers that rallied a minimum of 10 small businesses in their community and signed up to support Small Business Saturday received a prize package that included promotional materials and consumer giveaway items and Shop Small gift cards to be distributed to shoppers during Small Business Saturday events.

Carmen Schramm of the Yankton Chamber signed up for this program as a way to highlight the importance of small business. She stated, "The Yankton retail community is made of roughly 85 percent small businesses so it's extremely important for consumers to recognize what these businesses do for the local economy. Every business in Yankton is vital to our area and we want to encourage people to shop local this holiday season. Small Business Saturday is intended to bring awareness and encourage support of our independent retailers during the holiday season."

Yankton Mayor Nancy Wenande is thrilled that the small business community will be participating in this event.

"As a small business owner myself, I understand the commitment the local small business owner has to our community," she said. "Small Business Saturday is a great reminder to shop local and make the extra effort to support those businesses that are such an important part of the Yankton economy. I would like to challenge everyone to make Saturday an adventure by visiting and shopping in stores that are new to you. Yankton businesses owners give back to the community in a variety of ways and this is one way you can show your appreciation to them."

Why Cruise Control Has Power Switch

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI
 King Features Syndicate

Dear Tom and Ray:

I have a 2003 Honda Accord coupe. Like most cars, it has three cruise-control buttons: the main on-off cruise button, the Set button and the Resume button. I use the cruise control a lot, so I just leave the main switch on all the time. My husband thinks that this is bad for the cruise control, and that it could be dangerous if I were to accidentally press the Resume button when not meaning to. To me, this does not make sense, because when the engine shuts off, it does not retain the Resume memory, and it seems unlikely that anyone would accidentally press the Resume button anyway. Can you settle this dispute for us? Is there any reason why someone would not want to leave the main cruise on all the time? —Lana

TOM: Lana, you're right that leaving the main cruise control switch in the "on" position will not harm the cruise-control system in any way.

RAY: But your husband's right that the main on/off switch is there for your safety. It's actually pretty easy to hit the Set and Resume buttons by accident, because those controls are deliberately placed within very easy reach of your fingers — like on the steering wheel or the stalk.

TOM: And if you're making a turn, or trying to switch on your wipers or blinkers, or who knows what, it's not very hard to hit one of the cruise-control buttons inadvertently. How do we know? We've done it!

RAY: Is it a disaster if you hit the Resume button by mistake? Not necessarily. Like you say, there may be no speed stored in the cruise control's memory. Or, if there is, you may quickly realize what has happened and tap your brakes to disable the cruise control.

TOM: But there are situations in which it can be a disaster. If you've been on the highway doing 70, and then hit some heavier traffic and slow down to 50, you could hit the Resume button and suddenly make the car accelerate 20 mph while in that heavy traffic.

RAY: And if you're startled and don't realize why it's suddenly accelerating, you may panic and not have the presence of mind to tap the brakes before you plow into the car in front of you.

TOM: We know that lots of people just leave the main cruise switch on all the time. It's understandable. But our recommendation (and the recommendation of our lawyers, who are standing here glaring, with their arms crossed, as we speak) is to turn off the cruise-control system when you're not actively using it. That's the safest thing to do, and it's why the switch exists.

Rivalry

times and that, in the sport of football, is awkward. They were still big games, but it was different."

Among many memorable moments, one stands out, Stiegelmeier said.

"My favorite memory of this contest was the 1999 game when there were two great tailbacks on the field, Jamel White for USD and Josh Ranek for SDSU," he said. "The students at USD had a special system set up to keep track of the yards for each tailback, a 'running total,' if you will.

"It was a great game with a score of 43-30. The Jacks won and Ranek won. Ranek 254 to White's 120."

Stiegelmeier expected something would be missing from the state's athletic landscape when the series ended. SDSU first made the transition to NCAA Division I, followed by USD. They now both compete in the Missouri Valley Football Conference as members of the Football Championship Subdivision (FCS).

"After we went FCS (I-AA), it seemed like the fans would be lost without the rivalry, but our attendance has almost doubled through the transition," he said.

"SDSU had a great vision (in going to Division I), and we in South Dakota have all benefited. And now, 'The Game' is back."

STEVE IMMING, JERRY OSTER

The WNAX broadcasting duo of Steve Imming and Jerry Oster brought the play-by-play and color of Jacks football to audiences in five states, far beyond the Yankton studio.

Imming was recently honored during the SDSU homecoming known as Hobo Day. He was selected for the category of non-alumnus award for service.

"I won't be in Brookings on Saturday, but I'm looking forward to the renewal of the rivalry," he said.

The fans will be the ones giving the newly-renewed rivalry a jump start, he said.

"Most of the players either are too far removed from the last meeting or come to South Dakota from other states," he said. "They have heard about the rivalry, but probably won't really feel it until they see the large and loud crowd Saturday."

For Imming, it's hard to pinpoint just one contest.

"I don't know that I have one specific memory that stands out, because each rivalry game brought its own electricity and anticipation," he said.

However, one player stands out in his mind.

"If I had to mention a memory, it would be watching Josh Ranek, because as good as he was during his entire career, he always seemed to step it up a notch against the Coyotes," he said.

"(Ranek) had some standout moments. He had that big fourth-quarter touchdown run that brought the Jacks from behind in 1999 and also had a big 90-plus yard run for a score a couple years later at USD."

With both teams completing their Division I transition, South Dakotans are now assured of a football battle already seen in other sports, Imming said.

"Renewing the rivalry brings back the statewide interest with both teams in the same NCAA classification and both teams in the same league for football and basketball as well as other sports.

Oster also recalled several big memories of the "State-U" rivalry.

"One of the best was the '85 game in Brookings ... nice day, big crowd, over 16,000 (in attendance), and the Coyotes were undefeated and ranked No. 1 in the country," he said. "The Jacks started strong on defense, got an early lead and won 24-12."

The 1995 game was also memorable, Oster said.

"Mike Daly was the coach, and it was kind of an up-and-down year, but the Jacks won at the DakotaDome 31-3," he said.

And like Imming, Oster pointed to the 1999 game with Stiegelmeier as the head coach.

"That was the year Ranek rushed for over 2,000 yards," Oster said.

Many more highlights come to mind, and new memories will be created as the rivalry resumes and heats up, Oster said.

"(I'm) glad to see the games start again!" he said.

CHUCK IVERSON

Mount Marty College athletic director Chuck Iverson became a USD basketball standout and Coyote Hall of Fame inductee. While he starred on the hardwood, he does hold good memories of the football rivalry with SDSU.

"(USD Coach) Joe Salem had a pretty good streak going then and the football team was pretty dominant in the intrastate series," he said.

"I remember the signs around the athletic complex — the 'New Armory' — that said 'We Beat State,' then 'We Beat State Again,' then 'We Beat State 3 Times in a Row.' I think it got up to five times, if I'm not mistaken."

Iverson also recalls USD home games played in the great outdoors, prior to the opening of the DakotaDome in 1979.

"I remember the games at Inman Stadium — great atmosphere," he said. "Then there were the student-led cheers. Depending on what direction the 'Yotes were heading, the cheer would be 'All The Way To (blank)' — the blank being the favorite college bar in that direction."

Playing in basketball, not football, allowed Iverson to enjoy the rivalry in a different way.

"But whether as a fan or a participant, playing State was always the highlight of the season," he said. "I can't speak for every athlete, obviously, but competing against State was not a hatred thing. It was more like beating your brother. At least in our family, those were pretty intense battles, but when it was all over, you were brothers."

Playing in the great battles created special lifelong bonds, Iverson said.

"Some of my great friends were SDSU players," he said. "I played a lot of basketball with and against them after college and had some great times on and off the floor."

And now, a new chapter is waiting to be written, Iverson said.

"It's good to have the game back," he said. "It was always the biggest day of the fall sports season — probably the sports year, period, in South Dakota. Not having that game left a void, no matter what side of the fence you're on."

JIM CHESLEY

Yankton resident Jim Chesley graduated from USD in 1971, playing alongside Glenn for the Coyotes under Coach Joe Salem.

Chesley started most games for the Coyotes, with his first start against SDSU in Brookings. A broken play resulted in a USD loss, Chesley's only setback against the Jacks while he donned the Red and White.

Chesley, a Wakonda native, walked on as a football player at nearby USD. It marked a big adjustment from the eight-man football played in his hometown of about 300 residents.

"To me, SDSU was the biggest game played all year. I started every game against SDSU," he said. "A lot of my Wakonda classmates attended SDSU. During the game, I looked up in the stands for my mom and dad and for anybody from my hometown."

The shoe was on the other foot when Chesley worked as a graduate assistant for the Jacks while earning his master's degree at SDSU.

"I actually coached against USD while I was at Brookings," he said. "During that time, we tied, so I didn't have to beat them or lose to them. For me, it was a win-win situation."

Chesley also recalled playing USD home games at Inman Field,
