Marian was a graduate of Avon High School. She received her teaching degree from Southern State College in Springfield and then taught at the James and Mawhinney Country Schools.

Marian married Harlen A. "Bud" Voigt at her parents' home in rural Avon on May 25, 1950. Nine children were blessed to their union.

Marian was a wife, mother, grandmother and homemaker. As a son puts it: "Mom provided a daily example of what it means to believe in Jesus Christ and to follow Him with all your heart.

She had unwavering faith no matter the circumstances and would remind her children time after time that 'God is in control!' These words were lived out in every situation, and brought such a sense of God's safety and security to her family. Mom's tender heart expressed itself in 61 years of marriage to Dad and in her love for her children and grandchildren. She also loved growing roses and watching and feeding birds in her backyard. She spent many precious moments caring for her beloved dog, Rex.

Paging through Mom's Bible, one discovered how great a passion she had for teaching children God's Word. She was also very sure that her students wrote out their Bible verse so that it would stick in their minds!

Mom's faith, her marriage, and her family were of greatest importance to her. She left us with her footprints, side by side with Jesus."

Marian was a member of the Danzig Baptist Church where she taught Sunday School and played the piano and organ. She also was a member of the Women's Missionary Fellowship and the American Legion Auxillary.

Thankful for having shared her life are her children and their spouses: Dave and Jan of Avon, Ramona Bloodgood and Dan of Mitchell, Barb Van Gerpen and Lorne, June Finck and Jerry,

Military

That relieved a lot of stress."

Some call-ups, such as for natural disasters, allow little or no prior notice to employers, Auch said.

"There could be a blizzard, and we had units called up last year when the Missouri River flooded. Not too long ago, we had units called up for six weeks," he said. "I could get scheduled for Guard duty on short notice. I usually don't know if we're doing anything until five or six days before. If anything comes up, then (my employers) work with me."

Now married, Auch has found the employer support even more of a stress relief for his family.

"Brett and Dan didn't even know about the award until they were presented with it," Auch said. "They weren't expecting anything. It's just the way they run the company. Work is important, but family is first."

The ESGR award provides an important "thank you" to employers, Auch said. "It's a token of gratitude for treating their soldiers the way they do," he said.

Kennedy, the firm's director of the survey and mapping department, found the ESGR award "gratifying."

"We have had people in the armed forces working for us for years. We have people in both the Guards and Reserve," he said. "They have a history in our country of defending our rights, and we support all of them and their family members. We appreciate what they go through."

The firm plans its workload to accommodate the military employees' absences, reworking the schedule if needed, Kennedy said. The company considers it a small price compared to the contributions of the military, he said.

"This (ESGR award) reinforces the importance of our military, not only to us but to the entire nation," he said.

At Steiner's Locker Sevice, the situation is different. Owners Joe and Kim Steiner were nominated for the ESGR award by employee Roberta Keller, a military spouse. Her husband, Brett Keller, works at the Yankton Federal Prison Camp and was deployed with the SDNG.

Mrs. Keller said she appreciates the Steiners' support during her husband's absences, particularly deployment.

"They give me the time to do whatever needs to be done," she said.

The Steiners praised Mrs. Keller as a hard-working employee and want to do whatever possible to support her family in fulfilling military missions.

"When Brett is on duty, she is handling things as a single parent, and it's hard for one person to do it all. She does a very good job of staying strong," Kim said. "But there are always issues, such as kids' activities or illnesses. We want to help her get done what needs to be done."

The Steiners see their support for soldiers and their families as part of the local fabric.

"It's all part of the community we live in. We're just proud to support our military families," Kim said. "It's very minimal, to give them what they need, after all they do for us. They risk their lives to fight for our freedom."
