

Is Norquist's Influence Fading? Some GOP Split With Anti-Tax Activist Over Budget Deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — For decades, conservative lobbyist Grover Norquist vowed to drive Republicans out of office if they didn't pledge to oppose tax increases. Many lawmakers signed on.

But now, several senior Republicans are breaking ranks, willing to consider raising more money through taxes as part of a deal with Democrats to avoid a catastrophic budget meltdown.

Tennessee Sen. Bob Corker says the only pledge he will keep is his oath of office. House Majority Leader Eric Cantor says no one in his home state of Virginia is pay to fund their government. Republican legislators and Democratic President Barack Obama's White House are haggling vigorously as they look for ways to reach agreement on detailed tax adjustments and spending cuts before automatic, blunt-force changes occur at the new year.

"Oh, I signed it," Sen. Jeff Sessions said on Fox News about Norquist's pledge. "But we've got to deal with the crisis we face. We've got to deal with the political reality of the president's victory."

Department of Theatre presents

When two American tourists stumble upon Brigadoon, a fantastical Scottish town that disappears into the Highland mist and returns for only one day every one hundred years, they discover an idyllic world (and love) hidden from the ordinary traveler. High spirited folk dancing and musical theatre standards like "Waitin' for My Dearie" and "Almost Like Being in Love" will thrill the whole family.
