Friedrich teaches the high school seniors how to survive once they head out into the world. "One semester, we study personal finance, and then we focus on business finance," she said. "With the personal finance, we focus a lot on budgeting. They learn how to manage their money when they get out on their own and start their first year of college." Friedrich also prepares the students for the onslaught of credit card offers that can make or break their credit history for years. "They all need to know about credit cards, which aren't bad if the person knows how to use them," she said. "We also study about risk management and insurance." As part of their coursework, Wausa students "play" the stock market, Friedrich said. "They have $100,000 to invest for the semester, and they are competing against kids across the state of Nebraska," she said. "They see who is making the most money through 14 weeks." The students research and select stocks, Friedrich said. They are taught the discipline of watching their stocks over the long haul rather than making quick trades. "They aren't trading every day, otherwise they would be paying stock brokers all the time," she said. "It's best to let something ride rather than trade all the time. During the project, we get some tips from speakers. We have some local bankers talk to us, and we once heard a stock broker from Norfolk." After graduation, high school students face huge financial decisions, particularly if they go on to college or other education, Friedrich said. A Wausa student learned during a college visit that the schools are stressing time and financial management. "I tell the kids, you have to plan and budget. And you need to set and accomplish goals," Friedrich said. Students need to care about their finances, which can be a challenge to teach young people experiencing their first taste of freedom, Friedrich said. The message becomes even more difficult if parents are paying for school or other expenses, she said. And that's where the Blue Star program becomes so valuable, Friedrich said. The Wausa students didn't attend this month's NYC event, but they still benefit from the test preparation and national recognition, Friedrich said. To qualify for the Blue Star Banner, a school must achieve a 75 percent passing rate on the national online test. In addition, a majority of students in a given grade level must have taken the test, or the students who took the test must achieve an average score of at least 80. Students who pass the test are Certified Financially Literate, earning their CFL. "The first year, my kids were scared of taking the national test. But they did really well and have gotten better and better," Friedrich said. This past year, the Wausa class averaged a score of 87. Students who score above 95 percent travel to New York for special recognition. One Wausa student has scored a 100, while another scored 94 and just missed the trip.

Last year's class consisted of Matt Wamberg, Sarah Banks, Malory Pryor, Carrie Buhmann, Dakota Cunningham, Jeff Bloomquist, Nate Story, Jon Molina, Keesha McQuay, Kaitlyn Rischmuller, Faith Nelson and Kyle Shimer. In addition, Friedrich has qualified as a Gold Star Teacher under the WISE program. She received a 90 percent pass rate in at least one of her classes on the WISE test. Because of her proficiency, she receives instructional materials for the national student test and can administer the on-line exam. The rewards for good money sense last a lifetime and go beyond a high test score or national recognition, Friedrich said. "I tell my students, 'You're not going to remember everything I tell you. But when you buy your first homes, there is something that's going to pop up. It's not the first time you will have heard about it, and you'll remember what we talked about.'"

• A boxcar will be stationed at the Milwaukee railway depot, near the freight house between Douglas Avenue and Walnut street here Friday, and the people of this community are being invited to load it with good used clothing for the needy Friday afternoon.
• Holiday Hill, Inc. Yankton's new ski resort, is approaching completion north of Holiday Village on the north side of Lewis and Clark lake. The ski resort being built by Mr. and Mrs. Ed English and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Burgess will be one of the biggest and best in the mid-west.

• Santa woke up to kick off the holiday shopping season at the Yankton Mall earlier Friday morning. Special events and shopping hours were planned around the event, which marked the first day of the Christmas shopping season.
• Are the Class AA defending champion Yankton Gazelles one of the best-kept secrets in the state? They could be, even with their 17-1 record and No. 1 ranking. For instance, little has been made over the fact that YHS last week wrapped up its 11th Eastern South Dakota Conference title in 13 years. And hardly a word has been said about the club rolling undefeated (12-0) through league play.

BOARD OF TRADE

CHICAGO (AP) — Grains futures rose Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade. Wheat for December delivery rose 24 cents to $8.73 a bushel; December corn rose 12.75 cents to $7.60 a bushel; December oats rose 4.25 cents to $3.73 a bushel; while January soybeans jumped 24.50 cents to $14.4925 a bushel. Beef and pork futures fell on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. December live cattle fell 0.03 cent to $1.2837 a pound; January feeder cattle fell 0.43 cent to $1.4692 a pound; while December lean hogs slipped 0.10 cent to 82.37 cents a pound.

also the competitive factor that performing provides. "I like doing well and competing for my school and hometown," he said. "YHS has done pretty well in duet interpretation and readers theater in the past." Adam said the school has also fared well in extemporaneous speaking, but that area is judged at the state debate contest held in March. Mandel thinks her team can perform well this weekend. "We started practicing in September, and since then students have practiced their pieces every day after school," she said. "We've attended several contests this year, including in Aberdeen, Mitchell and Sioux Falls, and have done well at those contests." Kallis said since this is a festival, each student performs his or her piece one time, and after a student performs, judges vote them as superior or not superior. "The judges look for the quality of the literature, how well the student captures the piece, vocal inflections and body language when they judge each selection," he said. "Students will either pass or fail based on the judges' votes. The biggest rule for when students pick out a piece is it must be widely available — a hard copy must be in place so judges can double-check students after they perform." Mandel said each category of speaking is a little different, but there is a 10-minute time limit, with a 30-second grace period, in each category. "Students can work from a script, but they should have it memorized for the most part," she said. "It should be to a point where it is known well enough that they can naturally gesture and be able to interpret and react with the script." Mandel said her team is anxious for the festival to start. "Our students have put a lot of time and effort into preparing for this," Mandel said. "It is nice to have the season come to a close and students being able to see the fruits of their efforts at the festival this weekend."
