DAILY RECORD POLICY

The Press & Dakotan publishes police and sheriff reports as a public service to its readers. It is important to remember that an arrest should not imply guilt and that every person is presumed innocent until proven otherwise. When juveniles are released from jail, it is into the care of a parent or form at the Christmas tree lighting which will take place around 7 p.m. at the plaza by the base of the Meridian Bridge.

First

Santa Claus will participate in the parade on board a historic firetruck, and organizers say once he passes your spot along the route, you should head towards the bridge for the tree lighting. "We are encouraging people not to go home after the parade ends, just go to the bridge to see the tree lighting," Lowrie said. "Dress warm and dress for the weather. The vendor fair will also have a lot of quality items and a good mix of goods people can buy.

Another weekend event is the Mount Marty College Music Department's annual Vespers performance which is set for Sunday, Dec. 2.

Chapel on the Mount Marty College campus. However, both performances are sold out.

Directing Vespers this year will be Kenneth Tice and he has some new performances planned for the concert.

We are adding a Gregorian Chant to the concert, which was part of the first Vespers performance back in 1982," he said. "All vocal ensembles will also be presented at the concert, including the a capella group that will also be playing at the Yankton Christmas tree lighting.<sup>1</sup>

Tice will also be adding some more carols for the audience to sing along with the students performing on stage. He said the college will consider adding more performances in the future because of the popularity of the event.

This year, Vespers will be rebroadcast on a local radio station on Christmas," Tice said. "This will help other people in the area who didn't get to come out to the show hear it for themselves.

There will be a number of other events this weekend as well including:

• The Corps of Discovery Welcome Center in South Yankton, Neb., will host "A Taste Of Christmas" on Saturday from 4-7 p.m. Area vendors will offer samples of their products and gift ideas for Christmas.

• The United Church of Christ in Yankton will hold its 19th annual Christmas coffee and bake sale starting at 1 p.m. Saturday. The church is located at 5th and Walnut. • Yankton figure skaters will be teaming up with the Yankton Toys for Kids program to help Santa Claus make the holidays special for lots by 2015.

Using news reports, the New America Foundation says that 337 CIA drone strikes in Pakistan alone have killed an estimated 1,932 to 3,176 people since 2004. Of those, 1,487-2,595 were reported to be militants — making the average non-militant casualty rate 18-23 percent.

U.S. officials tout drone strikes as helping them to cripple al Qaeda and terrorist plots.

What makes drone warfare particularly eerie to me — and ironically, acceptable to a lot of Americans — is that it is so easy," Terrell said. Soldiers can man a drone 7,000 miles away in Afghanistan from an Air Force base in the United States. Still, Terrell said the impact of war can still be felt by the soldiers. Traditional fighter pilots could drop their bombs and not even be around long enough to see a plume of smoke, he stated. "The drone operator sees the attack in real time from thousands of miles away but has intimacy with the fighting that no pilot has ever had before," Terrell said. "No pilot before has dropped a bomb and seen body parts fly. Now that is happening." After a day's work, these soldiers will go home to their families.

is not combat killing. It's assassination. You find this person going about their business. You may track them for days. They are going shopping, to prayer, a funeral or a wedding.

As a co-coordinator for Voices for Creative Nonviolence. Terrell went to Afghanistan in 2010 in order to visit with the people there about the impacts of the ongoing war.

He called the capital city of Kabul the most horrible place he has ever seen. People immigrate from the Afghan countryside they love to the city on a daily basis despite its lack of housing and sanitary services. "They're going because of the drones and the night raids (by U.S. soldiers)," Terrell stated. "They are afraid to be out in the countryside." While there, he met people who had lost family members as a result of both drones and night raids "At the time, there were some people who were very afraid of what will happen when the United States leaves. It's not a majority," Terrell said. "But when you talk to them, they want the U.S. to stay but they want the airstrikes to stop and they want the night raids to stop."

By speaking about his experiences and publicizing the use of drone attacks, Terrell hopes other Americans will take the issue more seriously.

"The challenge of this is, we have the technology to kill at long distances," he said. "There is an Arab proverb that says that a true prophet is a person who can love at long distance. I think what the American people desperately need is, while we have this technology to kill people who are very far away and strange to us, to be at least as ready and work just as hard to figure out how we can love the people who are so far away. "I think our best ethical, moral and religious energy needs to be put toward loving these people. Otherwise, we're just making the world a much more dangerous and scary place."

for nonviolence and social justice, and Terrell said he has been thinking about her a lot lately. In the weeks since his sentencing, Terrell has been speaking at universities and to anyone willing to listen about what he sees as the immorality of drone warfare.

It's not the first time he has been jailed for protesting drone strikes. Terrell spent a night in jail in 2008 after a protest at a military base in Nevada.

In July, the New York Times reported that the U.S. Air Force had more than 1,300 drone pilots stationed at 13 or more bases across the United States. That number does not include those flying drones for the classified C.I.A. drone program that has conducted missions in Pakistan, Somalia and Yemen. It is projected that the Air Force will need more than 2,000 drone pi-
