Spark Plugs Have Individualized Fit

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI
 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Dear Tom and Ray:
 I was shopping for spark plugs for my 2002 Dodge truck from a company that has a site on the Internet. They had spark plugs for carbureted engines and fuel-injected engines. I bought plugs for injected engines. Is there a difference? — Tony

TOM: Every engine has its own unique requirements for spark plugs, Tony. It's not really based on whether the engine is carbureted or fuel-injected; it's based on the way the engine was designed.

RAY: For one thing, engines have different physical characteristics. For instance, some engines have thicker cylinder heads and require longer plugs with more threads to get the tip of the plug into the combustion chamber.

TOM: The amount of room on top of the cylinder head is another consideration. Older engines had only two valves per cylinder, so there was plenty of room for a nice, fat spark plug to stick its nose into the cylinder. But the majority of engines today are multivalve. You could have four or five valves cut into the top of each cylinder now, leaving much less room to fit a plug there. So most newer engines call for smaller, thinner plugs.

RAY: The other reason plugs are specific to engines is because the vehicle's engineers designed the plug as part of a system needed to create a very specific pattern of combustion. They may want a spark plug with a hotter spark, or one that sits farther down in the combustion chamber to produce the precise shape, size and duration of flame they're looking for in there. Those details affect an engine's power, gas mileage and emissions.

TOM: For those reasons, there are hundreds of different spark plugs on the market. The only way to know which one you need is either by removing an old one and reading the number, or by looking up a car's year, make, model and engine size in a parts locator, and getting the plug number that way.

RAY: Perhaps what you were seeing was a general "spark plugs for Dodge trucks" page on a website. Over time, there certainly have been both carbureted and fuel-injected engines used in those trucks.

TOM: But not in 2002. By then, every car and truck sold in the United States was fuel-injected. That means there's only one correct spark-plug type for your truck, Tony. I hope you got that one.

Proceeds Benefit Local Economy, Youth Football

An estimated $15,000 in Chamber Dollars were awarded to 12 lucky winners at the Yankton Chamber's fourth annual "Shop Local/Soccer Kickoff Party." Additionally more than $9,000 was raised to support the Shop Local campaign for the holidays and Yankton Youth Soccer.

The winners were announced during the event held at Czeckers Grill & Bar on Friday, Nov. 15. The drawing was the culmination of a five-week fundraising campaign to support the Yankton Youth Soccer program and the Yankton Area Chamber of Commerce's Shop Local campaign.

The purpose behind the raffle was to raise money to benefit a local youth organization and raise the awareness of the impact of shopping locally. The Chamber will take its portion raised and put it directly back into the community for the holiday season by distributing Chamber Dollars.

"These Chamber Dollars will be distributed to area consumers in creative ways during the holiday season," said Carmen Schramm, executive director of the Yankton Area Chamber of Commerce, "The Yankton Youth Soccer Association will use the funds raised for their long range field planning goals."

Dan and Judy Walbaum and Jeff Schrempp won the two Grand Prizes of $5,000 in Chamber Dollars. The ten $500 chamber dollar winners were: Jill Hunhoff/Sandy Sorenson, Kellen Moser, Brad Dykes, Diane Larson, Jim Means, Gail Gubbels, Deb Howell, Doreen Myers, Denny Fler and Brian Huber.

The event featured live music by Mrs. Begley and the Boys and stadium food from Czeckers Grill & Bar.

The Chamber and Yankton Youth Soccer thank everyone who purchased a ticket. As you shop in Yankton this holiday season, you may have the opportunity to win Chamber Dollars as a reward for shopping locally. For more information about Chamber Dollars, visit www.yanktonsd.com/chamberdollars or call (605) 665-3636.

Use Tax Due Online

PIERRE — Holiday shopping has begun and as South Dakotans head to their computers to search for great deals, the South Dakota Department of Revenue reminds them that state and municipal use tax may be due on their purchases.

Business Tax Division Director Doug Schinkel says many consumers do not realize that most Internet retailers are not collecting sales tax on online sales, so use tax would be due.

"Many people assume they are being charged sales tax by Internet retailers because they are used to paying sales tax on items they buy in a storefront business," Schinkel said. "But in many cases, the Internet retailer is not charging the tax. If an individual buys something online and is not charged sales tax on the item, it is up to the purchaser to pay use tax to the state."

South Dakota's use tax rate is 4 percent, the same as the state's sales tax rate. Municipal tax may also be due based on where the purchaser receives the goods. Schinkel says shoppers can find use tax reporting forms and other information on South Dakota's use tax on the Department of Revenue website at <http://www.state.sd.us/drr2/businesstax/st/usetax.htm>.

Do you have questions on use tax? Contact the Department's toll-free helpline at 800-829-9188 or your local Revenue office for assistance. Revenue Offices are located in Aberdeen, Mitchell, Pierre, Rapid City, Sioux Falls, Watertown and Yankton.
