Phase one was bid out at $523,000. The total cost of the project, as it is planned at the moment, is $650,000, including the cost of phase one.

Larson said he hopes the plaza will serve as a focal point of the downtown Yankton experience.

The biggest thing is just to have another gathering space for people," he said. 'Everybody knows the goal has been to have a vibrant downtown Yankton. To have a vibrant downtown, you have to have people in the downtown walking around, shopping, eating, relaxing, exercising and doing all that kind of stuff.

He added he believes the finished product will help erase any doubts based on the experience of turning the Meridian Bridge into a pedestrian bridge.

"With the plaza area, we know that there's been some naysayers," he said. "There was some naysayers when the bridge was originally converted to a pedestrian trail system, but after it was done, we heard a lot of those naysayers come over to the side that it was a great asset to the community. ... The plaza just ties into that.'
