up to 30 miles per hour, and 6-10 inches of snowfall is possible in these areas.

Snow was expected to move over the northern high plains and into the upper Great Lakes by tonight, with accumulations of close to a foot in parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin and up to 2 feet in the upper peninsula of Michigan, forecasters said.

Locally, the Yankton area should see high winds and light snow, but only minor accumulations.

But the real story is going to be the temperatures. The high temperature in Yankton today is expected to reach the mid to upper 30s early, with temperatures slipping to the upper 20s by 5 p.m., according to the National Weather Service. Winds are expected to be 15-25 miles per hour with gusts up to 35 miles per hour.

Thereafter, temperatures for the rest of the week are expected to only climb into the

Fall River Attorney Is Waiting On Court Ruling

EDGEMONT (AP) — The South Dakota Supreme Court needs to issue a clear ruling on a proposed project to clean oil-contaminated soil near Edgemont before ballots can be counted on the issue, the Fall River state's attorney said this week.

Voters in Fall River County were asked on Election Day whether they want oil-contaminated soil from other properties to be cleaned at a 5-acre site near Edgemont and used as topsoil or in construction projects. Fall River state's attorney Jim Sword said this week he won't count those ballots until the state's high court rules whether they could affect the future of the proposed farm.

The project has been approved twice by the County Commission in the last year, but it has faced opposition from local residents who question whether it's safe. Opponents ultimately got the issue onto the ballot.

At the site, oil-contaminated soil would be brought in and stirred to remove contaminants. High Plains Resources LLC would own and operate the site.

The project proposed by the company was originally approved in March by the county commission, but the public wasn't notified, so the commission rescinded its approval, the Rapid City Journal reported.

It later held public meetings and approved the project again, but residents concerned about whether it was safe gathered enough signatures to put the question of the project's future on the Nov. 4 ballot.

Despite landing on the ballot, High Plains challenged the initiative in court. On Oct. 31, Circuit Judge Robert Mandel ruled that the commission couldn't rescind its original approval of the project and said the results of the ballot question had no bearing.

Sword said he has challenged Mandel's decision and asked the state's high court to put the circuit court's decision on hold.

Until a ruling comes from the Supreme Court, Sword said, officials will keep the uncounted ballots Fall River County Treasurer's Office.
