The Problem Here Isn't The Car, It's That The Owner Has Fallen Out Of Love With It

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI

Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Dear Tom and Ray:

From the time she was 14 years old, our daughter was dying for a New Beetle, and she finally bought a brand-new one after college, in 2009. The car is now five years old, and she is complaining that it is a "disposable car," meaning that once it starts having problems, everything on it is going to fall apart. She wants to trade it in for a Honda Fit. We think she just wants a new car. How good is the 2009 New Beetle? Is it worth keeping? Mind you, nothing has gone wrong with it yet — she just wants to be "ahead of the game." Also, she said it gets bad gas mileage for a small car. What is your opinion? We don't want her to get a new car. This one is paid off, and she has college (and master's degree) loans to worry about. — Rita TOM: I'll tell you exactly what's wrong with this Beetle, Rita: Your daughter has fallen out of love with it.

RAY: Otherwise, it's fine. It's basically the same car as the VW Golf and Jetta, with a different body. And while it's not at the top of my durability and ease-of-repair chart, it's certainly in the acceptable range.

TOM: There's no evidence to suggest that once one thing goes wrong, the whole car is going to turn to dust. If you want to see cars that have turned to dust, look in my driveway!

RAY: That's not to say that it won't cost some money in the coming years. A 5-year-old car inevitably will need repairs. But all of the evidence shows that if you add up what you spend on repairs, it still won't come close to the cost of a new car.

TOM: So she won't be "ahead of the game." She'll be deeper in debt, with new-car payments every month instead of occasional repair bills.

RAY: If a car is eight or 10 years old, or has very high mileage, then you can start to ask whether it's worth it to keep putting money into repairs. But her car is still in middle age. There's no good economic argument for ditching it now.

TOM: She's obviously a stylish kid. The Beetle was a stylish choice back in the 2000s, and the Fit is a stylish choice now. But style and economics often are mutually exclusive, and she'll have to decide which one is more important to her.

RAY: One look at my brother, and you'll know which one he chose.

Do you really need that truck if you only make one trip to the lumberyard per year? Find out what kind of car NOT to get in Click and Clack's pamphlet "Should I Buy, Lease, or Steal My Next Car?" Send $4.75 (check or money order) to Next Car, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.
