2015 Festival To Present 'Macbeth'

BY SARAH WETZEL
Vermillion Plain Talk

VERMILLION — Chaya Gordon-Bland, assistant professor of movement and Shakespeare at the University of South Dakota, stood before a room full of USD theater supporters Friday night to both introduce "Romeo and Juliet" on its opening night and to announce the play title for the South Dakota Shakespeare

Festival's 2015 season. The 2015 production will take on "Macbeth." It will be held at Vermillion's Prentis Park June 11-14. According to Gordon-Bland, the festival will be taking an exciting turn from their recent productions. "After a rollicking ride of light comedies of 'As You Like It' and 'Taming of the Shrew' and upon receiving input from our audience face we're excited to take on some darker matter this summer," Gordon-Bland said. Gordon-Bland said Macbeth is meant to explore the quest for power, the dangers of vaulting ambition, fate vs. free will and the frailty of the human condition. "Some people may not get a hot meal if we didn't have it," Donna said. Donna is in charge of all the donations that are much needed to pull off such a big event. "We usually start planning a month ahead of time," she said. "The community has been very good with donations. People have been very generous."

Steve said that without the community's support with donations, they would never be able to pull off the event. "There are so many volunteers to thank," he said. "There are the people that make the turkeys for us, people who donate money, the Monastery and the Calvary Baptist Church — just to name a few." Since 1995, the team has only missed on year. "In 1999 we didn't have it," Steve said. "We just couldn't." Because of a death in the Johnson's family along with other factors, it was not a prerogative. Marlene said that this bad situation may have the best thing for the event. "The community really took ownership of the feast after that," she said. "Up until then, it was the few people that worked on it and it was our responsibility to put forth the money." Marlene said after that year, people have stepped forward and really made it a community event. "Sometime if you take off a year for something like this, it doesn't come back," said Marlene. "But this event came back threefold." The team is still looking for volunteer and donations for the event. Cash donations are accepted at the First National Bank of South Dakota, 332 Broadway, Yankton. To volunteer, contact Donna Madson at 760-3170. Leader he was friends with Arbach, and that the two had met while working at the Dakota Magic Casino and Resort near the North Dakota-South Dakota border. "This is a nightmare of a situation, but he was no monster," Ryan told the newspaper. "His choice and actions were wrong, but ... it wasn't the Colter I grew to know and was loved by many. He will be missed by me and many others, along with the victims that were my friends, as well. My heart is heavy for all of them." Joyce Arbach of Sisseton said she's related to Colter Arbach but that her family and his don't associate much. She said she hadn't seen him since she was a substitute aide and teacher at Sisseton High School, from which he graduated in 2011. Her son was his classmate. "He was a good kid. He was quiet and polite, well mannered. But that was then," Joyce Arbach said. "This is really kind of a shock because I never would have expected anything like this from him." As the clock struck noon Saturday, people who had gathered outside the home began a pipe ceremony to honor those who had died, the American News in Aberdeen reported. Sage was lit and offered to participants, who waved the smoke over themselves. Ceremonial chanting and singing blended with the church bells. People chanted again as the bodies of the victims were taken from the scene. The vice chairman of the reservation's Lake Traverse District, Darwin James, said he knew a couple of the people involved. He said the community has been shaken by the incident. "We are in shock right now, disbelief, to see something like this happen here," said James who lives a few blocks away from the house where the shootings occurred. Nearly half of Sisseton's 2,470 residents in 2010 were Native American, according to the U.S. Census.
