Dave Says

Doing The Right Thing

BY DAVE RAMSEY

Dear Dave,
 Our son is a senior in college. We all signed a contract before he left for school a few years ago stating that we would pay for school and provide him a car to drive as long as he maintained good grades and behaved in a respectful and mature manner. Over the last couple of years, his grades have dropped and he's been acting more and more disrespectful. We learned recently that he even told a family friend that he hated us. My husband went to confront him about his behavior and this statement, and our son admitted he said it and was unrepentant. My husband immediately took the car and cut off his cell phone, like we had agreed. But now, I just feel sick with worry. Did we do the right thing?
 —Carla

Dear Carla,
 I'm sure you do feel sick inside. If you didn't feel that way to some extent, you'd be a terrible person. This is your child we're talking about. And even though he brought this on himself by being a twerp, and you guys are simply following through on the agreement, it hurts you because you're human — and a good mom.

It may seem extreme to some folks, but what you guys did wasn't capricious or arbitrary. There was a deal in place, and he knew the terms of the contract. If someone worked for me and did or said or tweeted the kind of stuff you're talking about, I'd fire them on the spot. This kid has got to learn how to behave in the culture and that there are consequences for breaking your word and violating contracts.

But here's some good news for you, Carla. You married a real man — a strong and loving man. What he did took a ton of strength and courage. There are so many wimps in our culture today, but you married a good one. And whether this kid realizes it or not, he's got one heck of a dad who really cares.

I'll give you a prediction. Within 30 days, your kid comes home wagging his tail behind him. Even if he's stubborn, being hungry and strapped for cash — along with losing his wheels — will solve a lot of that. From diapers until they're out of the house, and even after they're out of the house, you make a lot of those kinds of calls if you're a good parent.

PURSUE NURSING ANOTHER WAY

Dear Dave,
 I'm 45 years old and a single mom. I have a decent job, but I want to go back to school to become a nurse. The money would be much better than what I make now, but I'd have to take out student loans to make this happen. Is it worth the risk?
 —Susan

landed on a solid area," he said.

He escaped serious injury, but he spoke of an acquaintance who died in a similar accident.

"My (Catholic) faith asks, why am I here when someone else died doing the same thing?" he asked. "There is a Greater Being (Who acted and determined) that I'm still going."

The 53-year-old holds a bucket list, although he didn't share specifics.

"A guy likes to control things, but the reality is that I don't control much," he said. "I have a magic list of things I would like to do before God takes me. I want to tackle whatever else God gives us."

Does he feel called to run for another political office? Huether says he will turn to his wife, Cindy, when making that decision.

"Only two people know what I'm going to do: me, my beautiful bride — and God," he said.

In the meantime, he intends to tackle life at break-neck speed. "I try to make the absolute most of each day. I squeeze as much as I possibly can and try to make a positive difference," he said.

When it came to making to making the most of his day, Huether was on the run Wednesday with a schedule filled from morning to night.

At Yankton, he addressed the downtown business leaders for two hours with no notes. Afterwards, he greeted people with hugs and handshakes. He also conducted media interviews while in Yankton.

Then it was off to Vermillion for a speaking engagement at the Vermillion Chamber and Development Company, followed by a meeting with a University of Dakota class.

He closed out the marathon back in Sioux Falls that evening, where he attended the annual law enforcement wild game feed.

"I think I'm going to be tired by tonight," he said with a grin.

BOYHOOD HOME

During a wide-ranging interview with the Press & Dakotan, one thing remained clear — Huether's roots continue to run deep in Yankton. He has remained abreast of local issues.

He commended the Yankton County Commission's efforts to develop a grain facility and Bon Homme County's efforts to attract wind farms.

He also commended efforts which have fallen short, including the Yankton County Commission's effort to raise more revenue for highways and bridges. The measure was referred and defeated at the ballot box.

"I'm proud of the Yankton County Commission's decision to invest in roads, bridges and other infrastructure. It was a fiscally prudent and responsible move," he said. "The message was loud and clear, but the folks in Yankton County didn't accept it."

Sioux Falls has passed some controversial projects by taking bold action in the face of opposition, Huether said. "You have trouble implementing things unless you come up with some game plan," he said.

The game plan needs to include informing the public and respecting opponents, he said.

"You need to communicate at the highest level. You need to go on the offensive," he said. "When it comes to folks who have different opinions, you listen and learn from them, but you're not beholden to them. You seek to find common ground and compromise."

Sioux Falls' success can provide a model for other communities, he said.

"Those same lessons apply whether it's Eureka, Mitchell, Rapid City, Chicago or LA," he said. "Ultimately, you'll get things done and done better."

Yankton enjoys tremendous attributes for success, Huether said. Those assets include the Missouri River, its location, its quality of life and its historic homes and downtown buildings.

"You need to pull out all the stops," he said. "You need to create an environment where people not only want to work here but also spend money and want to live here."

Huether said he is watching with interest the next step for Onward Yankton's "Big Idea" campaign. "You captured the attention of Yankton and South Dakota. I loved that the winning Big Idea included the focus on downtown," he said.

YANKTON'S PROMISE

Huether acknowledges Yankton won't follow the same path as Sioux Falls. However, he pointed to Yankton's tradition of pride and excellence in its schools, health care, recreation, city services and other areas.

In contrast, voters have recently turned down a number

Dear Susan,
 Is nursing a field worth pursuing, especially when it is something you love and would increase your income significantly? You bet! Nursing is a very honorable profession. Am I going to tell you to take out loans to make it happen? Absolutely not!

Save as much as you possibly can first — even if it's just a little each month. Then, I want you to look into Pell Grants, traditional and non-traditional scholarships and what I call the "indentured servitude" program. There's still something of a nurse shortage in this country, and there are hospitals and drug companies that will agree to pay your school bills if you go to work for them afterwards for a specific number of years.

I'm proud of you, Susan. Gaining knowledge and improving yourself and your career prospects are all good things. But stay away from student loan debt. It's bad and unnecessary!

of projects at the city, county and school level, Huether said.

"You'll always have critics and naysayers, but the 'no' vote is getting larger (in the Yankton area)," he said. "People don't want to make investments or see changes. But (the opponents) have earned it. They're controlling the dialogue and debate. It's all organized, and they're on the offensive. We can't find common ground or middle ground."

However, maintaining the status quo means you fall behind quickly, he warned.

"Why not go from good to great?" he asked. "We know we are capable of so much more."

A CHEERLEADER

Huether admits he has the reputation of being a cheerleader. He believes South Dakota has tremendous potential but becomes caught in turf battles.

"There truly has been the perception of Sioux Falls versus the rest of South Dakota, East River against West River, big town against small town," he said.

"When Sioux Falls does well, the rest of South Dakota does well. And when the rest of South Dakota does well, Sioux Falls does well."

"Like Wednesday's talk at Discovery Church, Huether continues to exhort others to make the most of their God-given talents and resources.

"I care about Yankton and its people," he said. "I have love and concern for this town. They have invested in me, and I want to help them make a positive difference."
