Twins Add Molitor To Coaching Staff Soccer: Lancer Women Pick Up First GPAC Win

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins have added Paul Molitor to their coaching staff, assigning him supervision of the team's base running, bunting, infield instruction and positioning as strategy. This is not some token job for a prominent, popular former player. All of those areas need a lot of work, so Molitor is going to be busy.

well as assistance with in-game

"He's certainly got a history and knowledge and a high baseball IQ," general manager Terry Ryan said. "There's no doubt about that. It fits pretty good here."

The hire was announced Tuesday by the Twins, who finished 66-96 for the second straight season after going 63-99 the year before that.

"There's really no part of the game that we can't do better at," Molitor said, adding: "I'm going to be able to work on guys who need to have a small-ball game, with the things they can do, with ways to score runs. I think that's kind of a lost art. Guys worry so much about getting on base, but they forget how to score and how to pick up 90 feet. While it wasn't horrible, I think it certainly could be bet-

Since 2005, Molitor has served as a minor league base running and infield coordinator for the organization. The last three of his 21 major league seasons as a player came with the Twins until his retirement in 1998. The 57-year-old grew up in nearby St. Paul, attending the same high school where Joe Mauer later starred and then playing for the University of Minnesota before his professional career was launched with Milwaukee and extended with Toronto. The seven-time All-Star is one of six players in history with at least 3,000 hits and 500 stolen bases.

"When Morgyn goes out on the court, I don't worry about her abilities. She's seen time at a variety of positions for us this season," Beste said. 'We've got a couple of girls who we can go to, whether we're putting them in to serve or to spot a player on defense. "It's nice to know you have
