Reminder Of Garbage Can Limits

All garbage cans used in the City of Yankton are to have tight fitting lids and be no larger than 33 gallons. Sealed plastic garbage bags set out the day of collection can be an acceptable alternative if you have no lid. Lids or sealed bags are necessary to control rodents, insects, litter and odors.

Shutdown Impacted SD Agriculture

BROOKINGS — Although the federal government resumed full operations Oct. 17, ramifications from the three-week shutdown continue as various crop and livestock reports are cancelled or delayed, said Kim Dillivan SDSU Extension Crops Business Management Field Specialist.

"Although the shutdown was relatively brief, any interruption of production and marketing information provided by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture (USDA) negatively impacts the decision-making ability of researchers, analysts, producers, and consumers," Dillivan said.

According to the USDA, the federal government shutdown prevented the agency from collecting and analyzing agriculture production and marketing data. USDA agency websites were also inaccessible during the shutdown. Currently, the USDA is assessing its data collection plans and evaluating the timing of upcoming reports. The following is a list of the status of several relevant USDA reports and websites with brief descriptions concerning their importance.

Dillivan provides a summary of the various reports and how the shutdown impacted their ability to provide information to the nations' agriculture industry.

WORLD AGRICULTURE SUPPLY AND DEMAND ESTIMATES REPORT (WASDE)

The WASDE reports world and domestic supply and demand for grains, oilseeds, cotton, sugar and livestock products. Published monthly, the WASDE report for Oct. 11, 2013 was cancelled due to the shutdown. The next scheduled release date is Nov. 8. "The October WASDE report cancellation is significant because the report would have contained updated production estimates for corn, soybeans, and other crops. Specifically, it would have used crop yield estimates to project production for the report. The October WASDE report would have also reconciled planted acres to help clarify estimated harvested acres. Parties that rely on this data may be forced to obtain estimates from private sources," Dillivan said.

CROP PRODUCTION REPORT

Scheduled for release on the same day, the USDA's Crop Production Report was also cancelled. The next scheduled release date for this report is Nov. 8, 2013. USDA will publish some information in the Nov. 8 Crop Production Report that was originally scheduled for release in the October report. This information includes planted and harvested acreage for corn, soybeans, sorghum, and sunflower.

CROP PROGRESS REPORTS

The USDA cancelled the Crop Progress Reports for Oct. 7 and 15. These weekly reports contain valued and timely information that is compiled from data submitted mainly by FSA and Extension personnel.

U.S. EXPORT SALES

Export data provides one piece of fundamental demand information regarding the strength of foreign demand for U.S. grain and livestock products. This data is released every Thursday, and should be available again soon. As of Oct. 17, the current data was not yet available.

FARM SERVICE AGENCY WEBSITE

Livestock and crop producers will benefit from the re-opening of the FSA website. The FSA website provides critical information for producers regarding the Conservation Reserve Program, loan programs, crop price and revenue support, and insurance products. It also provides access to resources concerning the farm bill.

The closure of FSA offices during the time of the record-breaking blizzard in South Dakota also resulted in a lack of guidance on reporting of losses that will affect any potential future disaster payments for these losses.

RISK MANAGEMENT AGENCY WEBSITE

Livestock producers will also welcome the re-opening of the website. In particular this website provides livestock producers with information regarding Livestock Risk Protection and Pasture, Rangeland, and Forage (PRF) insurance products. An immediate concern for livestock producers is the PRF sign-up deadline of Nov. 15.

Dillivan said that the lapse in federal funding also resulted in the delay of several agricultural estimates reports, including: Broiler Hatchery, Cattle on Feed, Chicken and Eggs, Dairy Products, Live-stock Slaughter, Milk Production, and Turkey Hatchery. These reports were originally scheduled for release during the government shutdown but will now be released in late October or early November. To learn more, visit iGrow.org.
