SD Prepared To Monitor Travelers From Ebola Affected Countries

PIERRE — The state health department will actively monitor travelers who enter South Dakota from Ebola-affected countries under new measures announced by the CDC, a state health official said today.

"All travelers who enter the U.S. from Liberia, Sierra Leone and Guinea, the three countries most affected by the Ebola outbreak, through five major airports in the country are screened for Ebola symptoms," said Secretary of Health Doneen Hollingsworth. "Low-risk travelers without symptoms can continue on. CDC then notifies destination states so the individuals can be monitored for 21 days, the longest time it can take from when a person is exposed to Ebola virus until symptoms can develop. We're prepared to do that monitoring in South Dakota."

Hollingsworth said active post-arrival monitoring means Department of Health staff will maintain twice-daily contact with the individual to check their temperature and the presence or absence of other Ebola symptoms such as headache, joint and muscle aches, weakness, diarrhea, vomiting, stomach pain, lack of appetite or abnormal bleeding. The monitoring provides an added safeguard to complement the existing exit and entry screenings.

The Secretary emphasized that while the risk of Ebola is low, the state and its partners in the private health sector are still preparing to respond. The state is also holding conference calls and webinars with health care providers to discuss issues such as submitting lab specimens, dealing with medical waste, the state's stockpile of supplies and exercising response plans. The state has also pre-positioned personal protective equipment used in patient care.

"We take seriously the responsibility to prepare for public health threats such as Ebola but I do want to emphasize that there are currently no Ebola cases in South Dakota and no contacts to Ebola cases in South Dakota and that active monitoring of travelers is taking place," said Hollingsworth.

Roadmap To Success Slated Oct. 28

WAGNER — A special parent and student night called "Roadmap To Success" is being held on Tuesday, Oct. 28, at 6:30 p.m. at the Wagner School Theater.

Every parent or guardian has high hopes for their child when they are born. Many children also dream about what life will be like when they grow up and they also have high hopes of what their life could be like as well. Many times obstacles stand in the way of a dream turning into a reality. So, how do you find out what the options are as we go through life? How do we find out what we need to be doing so we have a chance to make our dream into a reality beyond just hoping for the best? What kinds of things should be avoided so a person never gets the chance to even get on the road to success?

To help with this issue, Tuesday's special program will feature several different presenters who will provide the audience with a wide variety of options that exist for young people today. The focus group that is asked to attend this program are students in the 7th grade through grade 11 and their parents/guardians.

For more information about this program contact Dana Sanderson, Counselor, Wagner High School at 384-5426 or e-mail at: dana.sanderson@k12.sd.us

Assistive Technology Training Available For South Dakotans Who Are Blind, Visually Impaired

PIERRE — South Dakota is offering free training on accessing mobile devices and personal computers for citizens with vision loss beginning this month (October).

The S.D. Department of Human Services (DHS), Division of Service to the Blind and Visually Impaired (SBVI), will provide instruction to address built-in accessibility options in personal computing devices. Adults and high school students with low vision or who are blind are eligible for the free individualized training with up to five hours of instruction per program participant.

"Using technology to access and share information is an important part of day-to-day life in 2014, and nearly all jobs require the use of computers or mobile devices of some kind," DHS Secretary Gloria Pearson said. "Assistive technology training is a vital part of maintaining a high quality of life, including competitive employment, for South Dakotans who are blind or visually impaired."

The intent of SBVI's access-training project is to help people with vision loss maximize their ability to use their mobile devices and computers. No devices, applications or software will be purchased through the program.

"We believe the specific, individualized nature of the instruction will be a key to the successful training of each participant as well as the project overall," SBVI Director Gaye Matkce said. "Training may include topics such as utilizing built-in accessibility features, downloading apps and accessing everything from the Internet and email to other existing applications."

More information about this access-training program is available by calling SBVI at 800-658-5441, toll free, or the S.D. Rehabilitation Center for the Blind at 605-367-5260.
