Schweser's Holds Month Sale Before Closing

BY REILLY BIEL reilly.biel@yankton.net

Schweser's, a clothing store located in the Yankton Shopping Center, has recently announced that it will be closing its doors early next

"This decision was very difficult, and it is with much sadness that we have to make this announcement," said company president Tyler Smith in a press release. "We have operated in Yankton for many years, which means that this will leave a hole in the lives of many in the community.'

The store is one of many Schweser's that is going out of business despite the efforts of the company.

The sales trends, expense trends, retail shopping and demographic trends have been against us for a few years," Smith added in the press release. "In spite of our changes and attempts to find the right path to profitability, we have reached the end."

Yankton's Schweser's had been in operation since the 1980s and had been operating strong until the last few years.

"We have seen a drop in sales in some of our stores over the past three to four years that has been difficult to overcome," Smith said in the press release. "We can come up with many excuses that include the rise of Internet shopping, reduced trips to physical stores or changing demographics, but whatever the reason, we have not been able to overcome them quickly enough." Smith believes the store will officially close in January or February, and hopes that until then, loyal customers will benefit from the clearance sale that is now underway.

"We take pride in the legacy of service we have delivered to our communities for many years, and we hope to honor the legacy of Schweser's in Yankton with one final holiday season," said Smith in the press release.

Northeast Nebraska Man Pleads Guilty To Cattle Theft

CENTER, Neb. (AP) — A 44-year-old man is scheduled to be sentenced in November for stealing cattle from a feedlot in northeast Nebraska.

Norfolk radio station KNEN reports that Timothy Ketelsen, of Bloomfield, pleaded guilty earlier this month to charges of tax evasion, theft and illegal sale of livestock. Prosecutors dropped five other charges in return for Ketelsen's pleas. His sentencing is set for Nov. 24.

Court documents say Ketelsen's former boss reported that 13 head of cattle had been stolen from the feedlot. Investigators traced the cattle to a livestock market in Yankton, South Dakota, which paid Ketelsen for them.

Investigators also say they found four other instances in which it appears Ketelsen stole cattle.

In observance of the funeral services of longtime Century 21 Agent, Charlotte Herrlein, Century 21 will be closed from 1pm - 4pm. Thursday, October 1.
