Cramer-Kenyon Home Seeks New Board Members

Are you interested in history? Do you look at the architecture of homes built in the 1880s and 1890s and think, "I wish they still built beauties like these"? Do you know the difference between ruby glass and cranberry glass?

If so, you might be just the person we want to consider becoming a member of the Cramer-Kenyon Home Board

The Home is located at 509 Pine Street in Yankton but clearly stands out from other historic homes in the neighborhood. The large yard, the gazebo, the carriage house, the newly remodeled front porch, the picket fence and the bunting all identify the Eastlake Stick Style as being something

The Board of Directors cares for the home (interior and exterior) and maintains a high standard for the appearance and durability of both. The interior of the home features five fireplaces, ball and stick porticos, a butler's pantry and three floors plus a basement - and more - all of which are open for public tours from Memorial

Day to Labor Day. The present directors are Anne

Swift, President; Stan Hoffart, Vice-President; Margaret Lyons, Treasurer; Doug Sall, Secretary; Jack Lyons; Sue Lauck, Dan Smith, Gladys List, Joan Neubauer, Ted Powell and Joe Sejnoha Each one will tell you that it is a privilege to serve on the Board and care for the historical artifacts.

Meetings are on the second Tuesday of the month at the Home at 6 p.m., along with caretaker Veronica Trezona, the Board calendars tours and fundraising events and much

If you have an interest in being a part of history, contact President Anne Swift, 142 Katherine Way, Yankton SD 57078, tell her of your interest and give her information that will help her to select you to meet the Board.

recent involvement was in the musical "Young Frankenstein" in early August. He also has experience in directing, having helmed "Hydrangea Albright" two years ago.

Wright hopes his past experience as a performer will help encourage his cast to put on its best performance. "I think they picked me to direct comedy because that is what I love to do on stage," he said. "I like teaching these performers how to be funny and use their body language to make it funnier.

The background information the audience will already have on the characters and their story lines allows Wright, as a director, to add his own suggestions to help the play be successful. With humor being the ideal theme, Wright has gone all out.

"I really tried to put a lot of physical comedy into it, even though there is not a lot of that written into it," he said. "I think that physical comedy makes any kind of a comedy better."

Wright is hoping for not only a good show, but also an environment in which his performers can learn the craft and grow in the process. "You know you are getting somewhere when they start giving me suggestions on how to make it funnier," he said. "That lets me know that they are thinking about their character and developing that character to make it their own. That is the goal of any director.'

Wright also mentions that the basic set design and the lack of fancy equipment allows him to concentrate on the attention each actor brings to a character.

"Being a children's theatre, you want to focus more on the performers learning how to act and learning how to make their entrances," Wright said. "It's not an easy play. It's pretty wordy. I think we are pulling it off really

Although the play theme may be lighthearted, Wright takes the care he gives to his actors and the theatre seriously.

"I don't like to call them kids," he said. "I like to treat them like performers. They are actors like any other performer would be and I want to grant them that respect.

Audiences can witness these talents in action Oct. 22-24 at 7:30 p.m. at the Dakota Theatre with a matinee performance at 2 p.m. Oct.
