MMC Theatre Offers One-Man Show

The Mount Marty College departments of Theatre, Campus Ministries and Campus Programming will sponsor a visit of guest artist David Barker to the MMC Yankton campus Sept. 24-25.

Barker, MFA Performance Coordinator for Arizona State University's School of Theatre and Film, will conduct workshops for high school and college students as well as perform his one-man show, "Dodging Bullets."

On his sabbatical leave during the summer of 2004, Barker experienced an artistic block. He needed to develop a new solo show that was both personal and biographical. But even with almost 50 years under his belt, no major catastrophe or particularly unusual event had ever occurred during his life, and he suddenly found that he had nothing to write about.

Two bullets, fired in rapid succession, changed everything. As one bullet shot toward Barker, another flew toward his sister. Astonishingly, Barker dodged the bullet, but unfortunately, his sister was not as lucky; she had been shot in chest.

The story of how his brother-in-law "Dr. Jack," happened to open fire on him and his sister became Barker's sabbatical project — the one-man play "Dodging Bullets."

The play follows three story lines: Dr. Jack's attack on his wife and Barker; Barker's father's emergency surgery and declining health; and Barker's mother's dementia. Dr. Jack, a semi-retired, successful East Coast brain surgeon, had been abusing his wife for many years, and she finally moved out. On the fateful day of the attack, Barker accompanied his sister and his 15-year-old niece on a stop at the sister's home to pick up asthma medication for his niece.

"I went along to protect my sister," Barker said. "We approached the house and Dr. Jack appeared at the front door and ordered me to leave. Dr. Jack is a high-strung control freak, so when I refused to leave, he attacked me. We grappled briefly and he ran back into the house. My sister, niece, and I were in complete shock. He came back with a gun and began to fire."

The rest of the story is a dramatist's dream, a soap opera come true. The SWAT team arrives, snipers are placed on the roofs of the houses across the street, and Dr. Jack stays holed up for four hours, but finally turns himself in and is booked into the county jail. Dr. Jack's sister bails him out, but he is arrested again for trying to buy a handgun and spends the next 10 months in federal prison. Shortly after his release, he marries an Episcopal priest but he still had not faced his attempted murder indictments.

Barker plays 10 different roles including his mother in this drama. "It's invigorating to perform this show because everything actually happened. I'm not performing about imaginary circumstances as I usually do," said Barker, who also works as an actor and fight choreographer. He knew early on that the traumatic experience would make for vivid storytelling. "My sister was approached by Maury Povich and 'The Montel Williams Show,' but she declined. She said she was holding out for 'Oprah.'"

"Dodging Bullets" will be presented in Marian Auditorium on Saturday, Sept. 25, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Barker will lead a talk-back immediately following the performance. "Dodging Bullets" is rated PG-13 due to mature language and themes.

Barker will also be conducting two workshops during his visit to Yankton. "Safe Violence," a free Stage Combat workshop for high school students, will be held at 4 p.m. Friday, Sept. 24, in Marian Auditorium. "Connected Motion," a movement workshop for college students, will take place at 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 25. The cost for the college workshop will include admission to Barker's performance that evening.

To register for a workshop, e-mail ahenrickson@mtmc.edu or call 605-668-1533. Workshops will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis.

Scouts Hold Fiesta Fun Day Sept. 18

The Lewis & Clark Trails District of the Boy Scouts of America will be holding Fiesta Fun Day at the Lewis & Clark Scout Camp this Saturday, Sept. 18, running from 12:30-3:30 p.m. at the Lewis & Clark Scout Camp located 10 miles west of Yankton, just south of Highway 50.
