Notice of Public Housing Forum and 30 Day Comment Period for Housing and Community Development Plan

The public is invited to attend a Fair Housing Forum and public meeting on October 7, 2010. South Dakota Housing Development Authority in conjunction with the Governor's Office of Economic Development are in the process of completing an Analysis of the Impediments to Fair Housing for South Dakota. The Fair Housing Forum is a method to collect public and agency input regarding fair housing issues. The forum will provide preliminary findings of the analysis and will solicit the public's input on how to address and overcome the issues.

The public is also invited to review and provide comments regarding the drafts for the proposed 2011 Consolidated Housing and Community Development Plan Update, the 2011 - 2012 HOME Program Allocation Plan and the 2011-2012 Housing Tax Credit Program Qualified Allocation Plan.

Completion of the Analysis of Impediments and the Consolidated Housing and Community Development Plan are requirements to receive funding from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The 2011 Consolidated Housing and Community Development Plan Update details how the state will allocate its housing and community development resources from January 1, 2011, to December 31, 2011. Specifically the Plan describes the state's plan to allocate 2011 funds under the HOME Program ($3.5 million), the CDBG Program ($6.9 million) and the Emergency Shelter Grants Program ($350,000). In addition the Plan provides information regarding the Neighborhood Stabilization Program and Homeless Prevention and Rapid Re-Housing Program.

Eligible activities under the HOME Plan include rehabilitation, new construction, and homebuyer programs including lease-purchase, security deposit funding and homeowner rehabilitation. Changes to the 2011-2012 HOME Allocation Plan include revisions to match contribution requirements, revising scoring under the Primary Selection Criteria, including a Single Room Occupancy definition and cost limit, and revisions to property characteristics.

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) requires that each allocating agency makes available to the public, its Housing Tax Credit Qualified Allocation Plan, outlining the administration of the HTC Program. Proposed changes in the 2011-2012 plan include expanding the definition of projects eligible for the 30 percent eligible basis boost, removing additional SDHDA rent restrictions, reducing the required number of units restricted to Fair Market Rent, and the pertinent changes highlighted under the HOME Program above.

Copies of the plans may be obtained without charge from South Dakota Housing Development Authority (SDHDA) at PO Box 1237, Pierre, SD 57501-1237, by calling (605) 773-3181 or (TTY) (605) 773-6107, or by visiting our home page at www.sdhda.org. Please specify which plan(s) you wish to receive.

Persons who are interested in presenting comments on the plans may do so by attending the public meeting on October 7, 2010, or by sending the comments to SDHDA at PO Box 1237, Pierre, SD 57501-1237, faxing to (605) 773-5154, or emailing them to loraine@sdhda.org. All comments must be received in SDHDA's office by 5 p.m. CDT on October 15, 2010.

The meeting on October 7, 2010, will be held at several locations throughout the state on the Digital Dakota Network (DDN). The meeting will begin at 10:00 a.m. CT (9:00 a.m. MT). Digital Dakota Network (DDN) sites that will be available for this meeting are:

Big Night For Tea Party: O'Donnell Wins Delaware

BY DAVID ESPO
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Virtually unknown a month ago, Christine O'Donnell of Delaware rode a surge of support from tea party activists to victory in the Republican Senate primary Tuesday night, dealing yet another setback to the GOP establishment in a campaign season full of them. A second upstart led for the GOP nomination in New Hampshire.

O'Donnell defeated nine-term Rep. Mike Castle, a fixture in Delaware politics for a generation and a moderate who campaigned with the strong backing of party officials in his state and in Washington. Nearly complete returns showed her with 53 percent of the vote.

Democrats rejoiced, as did O'Donnell's supporters. Despite her win, O'Donnell will enter the fall campaign as an underdog to Chris Coons, a county executive who was unopposed for the Democratic nomination. Republican officials said as the votes were being counted the party would not come to her aid if she won the primary, citing a string of disclosures about her personal finances and other matters. The state party chairman, Tom Ross, said recently she "could not be elected dogcatcher."

In New Hampshire, lawyer Ovide

Lamontagne led former Attorney General Kelly Ayotte, 45 percent to 36 percent, with votes counted from 20 percent of the precincts.

A former chairman of the state Board of Education, Lamontagne campaigned with the support of tea party activists, while Ayotte had a coalition of establishment Republicans, former Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin and other conservatives.

Democratic New Hampshire Gov. John Lynch rolled to renomination for a fourth term, and he will face John Stephen, a former state health commissioner who won the GOP line on the ballot easily.

In New York, 40-year veteran Democratic Rep. Charles Rangel faced the voters for the first time since the House ethics committee accused him of 13 violations, most of them relating to his personal finances.

In all, five states chose nominees for the Senate, and six more had gubernatorial hopefuls on primary ballots. The winners had scant time to refocus their energies for midterm elections on Nov. 2.

Castle's defeat boosted the number of members of Congress who have lost primaries to eight, five Republicans and three Democrats. But that list does not include a lengthy list of GOP contenders who fell to tea party-supported challengers despite having the backing of party officials eager to maximize their gains in November.

With unemployment high and President Barack Obama's popularity below 50 percent, Republicans said the primaries reflected an enthusiasm that would serve the party well in the fall, when control of Congress will be at stake.

Democrats, however, said the presence of tea party-supported Republicans would prove costly to the GOP on Nov. 2. That proposition will be tested in seven weeks' time in Senate races in Nevada, Colorado, Florida, Kentucky and now Delaware, where GOP officials had long touted Castle as their only hope of claiming the seat long held Vice President Joe Biden.

The Republican primary in Delaware took a sharp turn for the negative three weeks ago after the Tea Party Express, former Alaska Sen. Sarah Palin and Sen. Jim DeMint of South Carolina announced they would come to her O'Donnell's aid.

Castle, a former two-term governor and a veteran of nearly two decades in the House, was repeatedly assailed as a liberal, a Republican in name only. He and the party responded by challenging O'Donnell's fitness for public office, and records surfaced showing that the IRS had once slapped a lien against her, that her house had been headed for foreclosure. She also claimed falsely to have carried two of the state's counties in a race against Biden six years ago.

In an extraordinary move, the state Republican Party began automated phone calls attacking O'Donnell in the campaign's final hours. The calls featured the voice of a woman who identified herself as Kristin Murray, O'Donnell's campaign manager in her 2008 unsuccessful Senate campaign, accusing the candidate of "living on campaign donations — using them for rent and personal expenses, while leaving her workers unpaid and piling up thousands in debt."

Biden resigned the seat in early 2009, shortly after being sworn in as vice president, and his successor, Democratic Sen. Ted Kaufman, pledged not to run for a full term.

Republicans in New Hampshire sorted through a crowded field of candidates for the nomination to a seat long held by retiring GOP Sen. Judd Gregg.

The winner will face Democratic Rep. Paul Hodes, who is giving up his seat in the House to run for the Senate.

Republicans must gain 10 seats this fall if they are to win control of the Senate, and their chances count heavily on their ability to prevail in both Delaware and New Hampshire.

August Retail Sales Up 0.4 Pct., Best In Five Months

BY MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Retail sales rose in August by the largest amount in five months, adding to evidence that a late spring economic swoon was temporary and not the start of another recession.

Retail sales increased 0.4 percent last month, the Commerce Department said Tuesday. It was the second straight monthly increase and the biggest gain since March.

Excluding a decline in autos, retail sales increased 0.6 percent. That followed two relatively flat months and a sharp drop in May.

A separate Commerce report said inventories held by businesses jumped in July by the largest amount in two years while sales rebounded after two months of declines. The rebound in sales was an encouraging sign that consumer demand is rising after two weak months. Businesses build up their stocks when they anticipate stronger retail demand in the months ahead.

The strength in August retail sales came in a number of areas from department stores to clothing stores and sporting goods outlets. However, bigger-ticket items such as furniture and electronics fell last month.

Best Buy said Tuesday that its fiscal second-quarter net income rose 60 percent. The retailer's standalone mobile stores helped to boost profits. Shoppers bought cell phones, appliances and tablet computers. Still, sales of televisions, video game consoles, video games, music and movies all fell.

Retail sales rose a revised 0.3 percent in July after posting back-to-back declines in May and June. Those decreases had raised concerns that the economic recovery was losing strength and that a second recession was possible.

Consumer spending accounts for 70 percent of total economic activity.

Even with the sales rebound in July and August, economists expect 2 percent growth in the second half of this year. That would be better than the 1.6 percent growth rate in the April-to-June quarter. But it would be well below the January-to-March quarter's 3.7 percent growth rate and not enough to lower the 9.6 percent unemployment rate.

Analysts cautioned that the August retail sales figures may not indicate a trend. Discounts on back-to-school merchandise helped drive gains of lower-priced items, such as clothing, they note. At the same time, the weak housing market has dampened demand for more expensive items. Furniture sales were down 0.5 percent, the fourth decline in the past five months.

Part of the boost in August reflected tax-free shopping days offered as an incentive by several states to spur sales.

"The incentive-driven gain in retail sales in August is unlikely to be repeated in September," said Sal Guatieri, an economist at BMO Capital Markets. "Real consumer spending will likely continue to grow at a subdued rate ... until job growth improves."

Economists said it was not surprising that consumer spending is not growing at a faster pace given all the problems facing households.

"Jobs are not readily available, wages are stagnant and income growth is mediocre," said Joel Naroff, chief economist at Naroff Economic Advisors.

One area of weakness last month was auto sales, which fell 0.7 percent. That confirms earlier reports that August was the auto industry's worst month for sales since 1983. General Motors, Toyota, Honda and Ford all reported declines last month compared to July and also compared to August 2009.

RIBFEST

are leaving Elk Point and riding to Ribfest. They are all leaving Elk Point at 8 a.m., but each biker is riding at his own pace," she said.

"Their organizer, Mike Lamb, contacted us about lending them our logo for their use on the ride. They think Ribfest is a great event and want to promote it, and I think this is a great way to do it. I told Mike that I would like to greet them when they get (to Yankton)."

"This year's Ribfest features seven vendors, many of them familiar faces from previous years, Rust said. Picnic tables and benches provide plenty of space for eating or just visiting. Many festival goers bring their own lawn chairs or take a seat on the sidewalk.

"We have a lot of the same vendors, but some will try new recipes. They are also selling sides, and we have kiddie vendors who sell corn dogs," Rust said.

"We ran out of food our first year because we had so many people, but we haven't run out since then. The vendors learned what to expect and now prepare enough food."

The day also features rib competition, with 26 amateur ribbers registered so far, Rust said. The entrants come from Wagner to the west and LeMars, Iowa, to the east.

This year's field includes returning champion Jeff Turman and runner-up Dr. Jim Hof, both of Yankton, as well as Yankton mayor Dave Knoff, Rust said.

"We are seeing more Yankton competitors than in the past. I'm not sure why, but they may be realizing that it's such a great Yankton community event. They have also talked to their friends who have competed and found it special," she said.

"People realize it's a great group of men and women with grilling knowledge. We have a lot of amateur ribbers who like to give out samples because they are proud of what they have come up with and want to share it."

Entrants can still download a registration form online at www.historicdowntownyankton.com or call (605) 260-3003.

Ribfest won't feature a return of last year's corn-eating competition, Rust said. However, a new event is the WNAX/104.1 The Wolf sand volleyball tournament at the Lewis and Clark Ford parking lot from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Participating downtown bars will again offer their special promotion, Rust said.

"You buy a cup and receive a wristband at the information booth at Third and Walnut. Once you get your wristband, you can go into the participating bars and each one has specials," she said. "You can bring your beer in the cup for Ribfest and drink outside in the event areas. Ben Hanten (of Ben's Brewing Company) has been working on the details and has done a wonderful job."

And, of course, there are the bands performing on the stage at Third and Cedar streets. The bands and their schedule include:

- 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. — Rust;
- 1:15-2:45 p.m. — The Mitigators;
- 3-4:45 p.m. — Mrs. Begley and the Boys;
- 5-6:45 p.m. — Austin Buescher Band;
