

What Women Need to Know.

Women's Health Care Trends

Trend: Women used to tell themselves they didn't need a baseline mammogram until age 40, and then might put it off even longer. However, as more women detect breast cancer at a younger age, more and more patients are getting mammograms at age 35 to secure a good baseline image for future comparisons. The development of digital mammograms not only allows for more detailed images, but also earlier detection before cancer is advanced.

Clinic Facts: With more facilities "going digital" it's important to know that Yankton Medical Clinic does provide digital mammography, but also digital localization and digital stereotactic biopsies to help with diagnosis. Additionally, as your Comprehensive Breast Care Center, we can provide real-time breast ultrasound, ultrasound-guided biopsies, and breast MRI. Whether you need a baseline mammogram read by our radiologist, or further care provided by our whole team—we are actively advancing the fight against breast cancer.
