A Question On Oil Differentials

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI
King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Dear Tom and Ray:
I have a general maintenance question for you guys. Every time I go to get the oil changed on my 1998 Toyota Tacoma, the service man always tries to sell me an oil change for the differentials. I always decline, because I don't want to pay the money and I'm not sure if the truck needs it. So, how often should the oil in the rear and front differentials be changed? I've tried to find the answer by looking through manuals but haven't had success. The truck was bought used two years ago, and I don't know the last time the oil was changed for the differentials. — Mike

RAY: I'm guessing they got a clearance price on 250 cases of differential oil, Mike, and they're trying to move it out the door so they can fit the soda machine back in.
TOM: You have very standard differentials, Mike. They don't have limited slip or anything fancy in there. They just have a ring gear, a pinion gear and a set of spider gears. I'm sure there are lots of Tacoma owners who never change the oil in their differentials.
RAY: That's what my brother would do if it were his truck. Of course, he takes the same approach to his underwear. But if it were my truck, and I wanted to be diligent about it, I'd probably change it every 60,000 miles or so.

CAR TALK

Tom and Ray Magliozzi

TOM: That doesn't mean you should ignore the differentials for 60,000 miles.
RAY: Right. Because the biggest danger is that they leak and you don't notice it. And then they would run out of oil and fry themselves.
TOM: I did that once in my old Suburban. The differential ran out of oil and started making a sirenlike whine all the time. I eventually went into hiding, because I was convinced the cops were chasing me everywhere I went.
RAY: So it would be very wise to check the oil level in the differentials every time you get your oil changed. That'll allow you to catch any problems early.

TOM: There are other vehicles with clutch packs, viscous couplings and more complicated differentials that do require an oil change every 30,000 miles. But yours is not one of them. So here's what I'd do in your case: Given the age of your truck, and given that you don't know if the differential oil has ever been changed, I'd say you should let your guy change it once. It certainly can't hurt anything.
RAY: And from then on, have him check the oil level for you when you see him. If you still have the truck 60,000 miles from now, and it still casts a shadow, you can decide whether you want to do it again. Good luck, Mike.

If it ain't broke, you won't have to fix it! Order Tom and Ray's pamphlet "Ten Ways You May Be Ruining Your Car Without Even Knowing It!" Send $4.75 (check or money order) to Ruin, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

LIFE IN POETRY

A Clear-Eyed Look At Life's Harder Edges

BY TED KOOSER
U.S. Poet Laureate, 2004-2006

This week's column is by Ladan Osman, who is originally from Somalia but who now lives in Chicago. I like "Tonight" for the way it looks with clear eyes at one of the rough edges of American life, then greets us with a hopeful wave.

TONIGHT

Tonight is a drunk man,
his dirty shirt.
There is no couple chatting by the recycling bins,
offering to help me unload my plastics.
There is not even the black and white cat that balances elegantly on the lip of the dumpster.
There is only the smell of sour breath. Sweated on the collar of my shirt.
A water bottle rolling under a car.
Me in my too-small pajama pants stacking juice jugs on neighbors' juice jugs.
I look to see if there is someone drinking on their balcony.
I tell myself I will wave.

ALS In The Heartland 2011 Community Walk In Norfolk

NORFOLK, Neb. — Hundreds of people will join together on Sunday, Sept. 11, at Skyview Lake in Norfolk, Neb., for the ALS in the Heartland 2011 Community Walk.
The walk will be held, rain or shine, to raise funds and awareness for an organization that provides free, individualized services and support to patients and families who suffer with ALS.

The walk is a fund raising event to maximize efforts to raise money to find a cure for ALS, to provide patient services including the Respite Care Voucher Program, equipment loan pool, support groups, and to raise public awareness about the disease.
"ALS is devastating in nature as it robs individuals systematically of their abilities — patients diagnosed with ALS lose the ability to move their legs, the ability to walk, the ability to write or move their arms, the ability to eat, the ability to swallow, and the ability to talk," Sabrina Schally, patient services director, said. "At the end of the disease cycle, patients are held captive in their bodies which are unable to move besides the blink of their eyes, all the while their cognitive abilities remain the same — meaning that each patient is fully aware of the death of each and every body part robbed of them by ALS."

All in the community are welcome and invited to register a team, join an existing team, or simply send a donation to support the cause. This can be done through the walk website: www.firstgiving.com/alsintheheartland, or by calling the ALS in the Heartland office at 402-592-2374.
