Hope You Got Out And Enjoyed The Weather: There Aren't Many Of Those Left In 2011

BY JAMES D. CIMBUREK
james.cimburek@yanpton.net

If you had to be outside on Tuesday, you had a perfect day to do it in the region. With temps in the low 70s, little wind and just enough clouds in the sky, Tuesday was one of those days where, if you didn't have a job that took you outside, you thought long and hard about calling in sick to enjoy the day. Lucky for me, there were two golf tournaments and a tennis triangular in Yankton Tuesday morning and afternoon, giving me a perfect excuse to spend about six straight hours getting some fresh air.

Had I not already scheduled myself to shoot those events, it might have been one of those days where I claimed "captain's prerogative" and reassigned them to myself. (As I weleated after a couple hours of fresh air Tuesday, quoting Mel Brooks, "It's good to be the king.") But anyone who grew up in South Dakota or northeast Nebraska knows that, once you hit the middle of September, those days become fewer and fewer. And, not coincidental, the days of a ton of daytime outdoor sporting events in the region are coming to a close for another year as well.

Hard to believe, but we are just 20 days from the opening day of the state high school boys' golf tournaments in South Dakota. Three days later, the S.D. State Girls' Tennis Tournament begins in Sioux Falls and the state soccer tournament begins in Mitchell. The day after, softball has its beginning of the end.

Within the span of two weeks in October, an extremely busy fall sports schedule will be reduced greatly and, with it, the excuses to be outside on (hopefully) a nice fall day. So take advantage of them while you can.

day — with six teams within 11 strokes of each other — is any indication, the GPAC race figures to be more balanced, Nebraska Wesleyan's Balak said.

"Our conference has gotten a lot stronger, from top to bottom, and that's been great to see," Balak said. "It makes it more fun when you can have more teams in the running."

"The good thing about having this over four different days is that the best team will win it."

The second GPAC men's qualifier will be held Oct. 6 in Hastings, Neb., with the final two scheduled for next April and May.

Though he narrowly missed out on the school record, Hoffmann said he is optimistic about his chances moving forward.

"For the first time out, 70's isn't bad," he said. "Hopefully I can keep that going."
