few years for us to solve challenges that have built up over the decades."

In the run-up to Obama's speech, delegates erupted in tumultuous cheers when former Arizona Rep. Gabrielle Giffords, grievously wounded in a 2011 assassination attempt, walked onstage to lead the Pledge of Allegiance. The hall grew louder when she blew kisses to the crowd.

And louder still when huge video screens inside the hall showed the face of Osama bin Laden, the terrorist mastermind killed in a daring raid on his Pakistani hideout by U.S. special operations forces b(euro)" on a mission approved by the current commander in chief.

The hall was filled to capacity long before Obama stepped to the podium, and officials shut off the entrances because of a fear of overcrowding for a speech that the campaign had originally slated for the 74,000-seat football stadium nearby. Aides said weather concerns prompted the move to the convention arena, capacity 15,000 or so.

Obama's campaign said the president would ask the country to rally around a "real achievable plan that will create jobs, expand opportunity and ensure an economy built to last."

He added, "The truth is it will take more than a few years for us to solve challenges that have built up over a decade."

In convention parlance, both Obama and Biden were delivering acceptance speeches before delegates who nominated them for new terms in office.

But the political significance went far beyond that - the moment when the general election campaign begins in earnest even though Obama and Romney have been pointing toward a Nov. 6 showdown for months.

To the cheers of delegates, Obama retraced his steps to halt the economic slide, including the auto bailout that Romney opposed.

"After a decade of decline, this country created over a half million manufacturing jobs in the last two and a half years," he said.

Turning to national security, he said he had promised to end the war in Iraq, and had done so.

"We've blunted the Taliban's momentum in Afghanistan, and in 2014 our longest war will be over," he said.

"A new tower rises above the New York skyline, al-Qaida is on the path to defeat and Osama bin Laden is dead," he declared, one of the night's repeated references to the special operations forces raid that resulted in the terrorist mastermind's demise more than a year ago.

He lampooned Romney's own economic proposals.

"Have a surplus? Try a tax cut. Deficit too high? Try another. Feel a cold coming on? Take two tax cuts, roll back some regulations and call us in the morning," he said.

Mocking Romney for his overseas trip earlier this summer, Obama said, "You might not be ready for diplomacy with Beijing if you can't visit the Olympics without insulting our closest ally." That was a reference to a verbal gaffe the former Massachusetts governor committed while visiting London.

tersection and a number of injuries were reported. Ambulances and other emergency response vehicles flooded the area and victims were carried away on stretchers.

According to former Yankton County Emergency Management

Director Jeremy Dangel, who coordinated the event with Bon Homme County Emergency Management Director Jon Vavruska, the biggest challenge facing responders during that exercise was triaging, or determining the priority of patients' treatments based on the severity of their condition.

Red Cross Responds As Isaac Causes Problems

As Hurricane Isaac hammered communities along the Gulf Coast and moved inland, the American Red Cross responded across multiple states — providing thousands of people with a safe, dry place to stay and something to eat.

More than 5,200 residents found a safe haven at about 80 shelters run or supported by the Red Cross in six states from Florida to Texas as Hurricane Isaac made landfall along the Gulf Coast. With individuals and families forced to leave their home and belongings behind, shelter populations are expected to increase as the slow-moving storm hangs over coastal communities causing widespread power outages and damaging floodwaters.

"This is a very large response that will go on for a long time, and we need the public's help," said Charley Shimanski, senior vice president of disaster services at the Red Cross. "After a difficult summer of helping people affected by wildfires, power outages and floods, Red Cross resources are stretched thin."

You can help people affected by Hurricane Isaac, as well as countless crises at home and around the world, by making a donation to support the American Red Cross Disaster Relief. Your gift enables the Red Cross to prepare for and provide shelter, food, emotional support and other assistance in response to disasters.

There are several ways to make a financial contribution to the American Red Cross relief efforts.

- Visit www.redcross.org;
- Call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767);
- Text REDCROSS to 90999 to make a $10 donation;
- Contact the American Red Cross/Sioux Empire Chapter, 808 N West Avenue, Sioux Falls, SD 57104;
- Contact the American Red Cross, P.O. Box 37243, Washington, DC 20013.

About 2,700 trained Red Cross disaster workers from across the United States deployed across the Gulf to run shelters, serve meals and distribute relief items.

The Red Cross pre-positioned 311,000 ready-to-eat meals, kitchen support trailers and truck loads of relief supplies with clean-up and personal hygiene items, cots, blankets, coolers, shovels, tarps and gloves.
