Rave New S.D. Senate Majority Leader

SIOUX FALLS (AP) — Republican state Sen. Tim Rave of Baltic has been elected the new majority leader of the South Dakota Senate

Senate Republicans on Saturday elected Rave to be majority leader. Rave replaces Sen. Russell Olson of Wentworth, who has resigned from the Legislature to take a new job.

Rave previously was speaker of the House before being elected to the Senate. He also was chairman of the South Dakota Republican Party for two years.

Republican Sen. Dan Lederman of Dakota Dunes will be assistant majority leader in the Senate.

Wounded Knee Museum Reopens

WALL (AP) — A year after a fire destroyed the Wounded Knee Museum in Wall, it has reopened in a new location in the western South Dakota city.

An electrical malfunction was blamed for the Sept. 2, 2012, fire that destroyed the museum and also took 30 museum exhibits linked to the Wounded Knee massacre of Dec. 29, 1890.

Insurance did not come close to covering the loss, but some items that survived the blaze are now housed in the new museum in downtown Wall, museum co-founder Steve Wyant told the Rapid City Journal.

One item that survived is a collection of 300 simulated eagle feathers suspended from a Lakota medicine wheel. Each feather represents one of the 300 men, women and children killed by U.S. Army soldiers at Wounded Knee on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation south of Wall. The medicine wheel broke loose from its supporting cables during the fire and landed on most of the feathers, protecting them from the fire, Wyant said.

The fire also spared 30 letters identifying medal of honor awards given to soldiers after the massacre and bronze glass plates etched with the names of victims. Cleaning the smokedamaged bronzes was time-consuming, Wyant said.

"I learned more about smoke damage than I wanted to," he said

By next summer, Wyant hopes to convert the burned-out shell of the old museum into a Native American Visitors Center, which would serve as a link to American Indian reservations.

New U.S. Citizens To Be Sworn In

BEATRICE, Neb. (AP) — About 45 people are expected to become U.S. citizens later this month in a special ceremony at the Homestead National Monument.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony at 2 p.m. on Sept. 16. The event is the culmination of the process for this group of foreign-born individuals to gain most of the rights of S. citizens.

Park Superintendent Mark Engler says holding the ceremony at the Homestead Monument makes sense because the Homestead Act encouraged immigration to the country.

The Homestead National Monument is located about 4 miles west of Beatrice and 45 miles south of Lincoln.

Helmets 4 Kids Emerges From Man's Own Personal Tragedy

Press&Dakotan

BY JILL CALLISON Argus Leader

SIOUX FALLS — When Troy Mundt tells the story of the bicycle accident 15 years ago that left him with permanent injuries, it's as if he's sharing it for the first time.

That's good news, and that's bad news.

He doesn't remember the accident, which left him with a broken bone and a traumatic brain injury (TBI); that's good.

If he tells the story too often, however, what little he has pieced together over the years, the distressing tale leaves him mourning the loss of the man he once was; that's bad.

Instead, the now 39-yearold Brandon resident prefers to focus on the nonprofit organization he has founded, Helmets 4 Kids. His goal is to make sure young bicycle riders realize the importance of wearing a helmet when they head out, the Argus Leader reported.

Since December 2011, when the Helmets 4 Kids website was launched and nonprofit status achieved. Helmets 4 Kids has given away at least 700 bike helmets, and Mundt and his personal and professional partner, Lissa Hendricks, have spoken to more than 2,000 children.

While they have received some sponsorships, the couple will buy the helmets effectiveness and hold schools accountable," he said.

Ricketts said Nebraska needs to find ways to encourage entrepreneurs to establish companies here and keep them in the state as they grow. But he said the state also needs to make sure agriculture and the rural communities that rely on it continue to prosper.

Ricketts said Nebraska also needs to hold the line on taxes and spending. He also said public money shouldn't be used to provide benefits for people who entered the country illegally.

Ricketts' last campaign was the most-ex-themselves if they can find help nowhere else. In fact, a major sponsorship fell through last year, and the couple still are paying off the helmets they purchased then.

Mundt, a 1992 graduate of Lincoln High School, had left South Dakota State University after a couple of years while he decided what he wanted to do with his life.

The accident occurred in the early morning, after he had left the graveyard shift of his job at a Perkins restaurant. He and a friend took their bicycles out, intending to watch the sun rise

"Next thing I know I'm in the hospital," Mundt says. "They put me in a coma for nine, 10 days. I spent a month or two in rehab, then a hard month in outpatient rehab, learning the rules of society, how to get my brain to work again."

Mundt had sustained damage of the temporal and frontal lobes. He no longer has a sense of smell and takes medications to control the epilepsy that developed as a result of the accident.

His short-term memory never recovered.

story 100 times, I might not remember it ever," Mundt says. Hendricks has two children share the traits of being impulsive and without guile. If they think of something, they say it, she savs

'That whole brain-tomouth filter doesn't always work for me," Mundt says. "I'll say, 'I said that out loud? That's a catch phrase of mine

After Mundt and Hendricks met, he told her of his desire to make something good come from his accident. A Web designer by trade, Hendricks created the website and pursued the paperwork needed to make Helmets 4 Kids a reality.

The pair were invited to set up a table in the Sioux Empire Fair's Safety Village earlier this month, and they do other events, including several library appearances. When they have the money to bring free helmets along, they do so.

Even more important, however, is reminding both children and parents that wearing a helmet should be routine. Parents, the couple says, often are more resistant to the idea than their kids. They didn't wear them as kids, Hendricks hears over and over again, so why should their children?

'Our No. 1 goal is to tell people about the importance of wearing helmets and get helmets to the kids whose parents can't afford them or won't buy them," she says. "And it's to teach parents to enforce the helmet use.

pensive Senate race in Nebraska history. Ricketts spent nearly $13 million, including almost $12 million of his own money, but lost badly to Nelson who spent about $7 million.

Ricketts said he thought relying on his own fortune would make him appear independent of special interests, but he acknowledges that some people thought it looked he was trying to buy his way into office.

"I didn't understand that when you raise money, you raise support," he said.

The other Republicans seeking to replace Republican Gov. Dave Heineman are state Auditor Mike Foley and state Sens. Charlie Janssen, Tom Carlson and Beau McCoy.

Two Democrats - state Sen. Annette Dubas and former University of Nebraska Regent Chuck Hassebrook — are also running for governor. Heineman can't run for re-election because of term limits

Against Insurance Subsidy Cheating

SIOUX FALLS (AP) — Peo-ple should not cheat when they apply for health insurance subsidies under the national health care overhaul because income discrepancies will show up later when they file income tax returns, a federal official said.

Uninsured people will be able to seek insurance under a new health exchange beginning Oct. 1. They will have to declare their incomes to determine if they are eligible for a government subsidy to help them afford the health insurance policy.

'This is all adjudicated at tax time. If folks try to play the system, it'll all come out in the end," said Jeff Hinson, regional administrator from the Denver office of the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services.

People who misstate their incomes to qualify for greater subsidies as they buy insurance "will settle up with the IRS," Hinson said.

Hiinson spoke recently at a seminar in Sioux Falls that included representatives of several South Dakota agencies that will help people seeking to buy insurance through the exchange, The Argus Leader reported (http://argusne.ws/1cVaeax). Each state will open an insurance exchange, an Internet marketplace, to help people buy insurance during an enrollment period from Oct. 1 through March 31 to comply with the Affordable Care Act.

Most South Dakotans already have insurance through private policies, group policies offered by their employers, Medicare or Medicaid.

But for many of South Dakota's approximately 71,000 uninsured people, the ex-change will help them enroll to get the insurance coverage required by the federal law. They will have to declare their income for the coming year to help calculate if they are eligible for a government subsidy.

The process would require people enrolling this fall to declare their expected income for 2014, and then complete their 2014 tax returns in 2015. At the seminar, Hinson said he did not know how the Internal Revenue Service would handle discrepancies, but it might be a matter of mathematical calculations in completing a tax form.

Hinson also said people will be able to report updates in their earnings.

John Mengenhausen of Horizon Health Center in works with clients who do not file tax returns because they do not earn enough money. Hinson said those people will have to file tax returns to be eligible for a subsidy to buy insurance.

Crosby-Jaeger Funeral Home of Springfield is in charge of the arrangements.

Robert Maynard Jelsma, son of Nick and Agnes (Shaver) Jelsma, was born July 9, 1929 on the family farm near Springfield, SD. He died Friday, September 6, 2013 at St. Michael's Hospital in Tyndall. Robert attained the age of 84 years, one month and 29 days.

Robert attended Equal Rights Country School and graduated from Springfield High School in 1947. He joined the U.S. Marines in 1951and served until 1953.

Robert married Beverly Odens on June 12, 1953 at Oceanside, CA. After his discharge, they returned to South Dakota where he farmed, sold feed and owned a gravel pit. Eight children were blessed to their union. Robert joined the Emmanuel Reformed Church on March 13, 1950 and remained a member all of his life. He also was a member of ment in his grandchildren and great grandchildren. He looked forward to coffee time with his many friends in his later years and tried to be first one there.

Thankful for having shared his life are his wife of 60 years, Beverly of Springfield; his children: Norman and wife Mel, Angie and husband Jim Martin, Donna and husband Tony Tennant, Russell and wife Beth, Darrell, Cal and wife Sherry, all of Springfield; Mary and husband Nick Vlasman of Vermillion; and NIna and husband Richard Reiff of Avon; 18 grandchildren; 18 great grandchildren; one brother Roy and wife Jana of Springfield; one sister Betty Herrick of Grand Rapids, MI; sister-in-law Shirley Jelsma of Springfield; in laws; and many nieces, nephews and friends.

Together they raised their five children and impacted many lives for the better. Howard passed away in on September 14, 2011 and has no doubt been waiting impatiently for his precious Betty to return to him.

Betty worked hard keeping a home, raising her children and helping to make a living during her life time. Her most enduring and favored jobs were at the Good Samaritan Society in Tyndall and as a home health aide for several years following that in Yankton. She had a special and gentle way of caring for those in need whether at work or in her personal life.

Betty was full of love and shared it freely. Her biggest

THOUGHTS For Your Family

A Position Of Honor

Pallbearers are tasked with the responsibility of carrying or otherwise transporting the casket during a funeral service. This honor is usually reserved for people who enjoyed an especially close relationship with the deceased. The pallbearers' proximity to the body and special responsibility for moving it along to its final resting place have both tangible and symbolic meaning. In fact, the term pallbearer is derived from the Latin word "pallium," which means "cloak," or covering. In historic terms, the pall refers to the burial cloths in which bodies were wrapped in ancient times. In military funerals, the pall is likely to be a flag. Pallbearers are thus responsible for the last representation of the deceased.
