State Capitol Bureau

PIERRE — Getting more people with disabilities into paying jobs in South Dakota will require better information to individuals and their families, better community transportation, more Internet access, more assistive technology, broader knowledge of the possibilities for businesses and workers alike, and possibly financial incentives through worker-compensation insurance rates, members of the state task force on disabilities employment said Monday.

The panel met for the third and possibly final time, with its report to Gov. Dennis Daugaard planned to be final in late October. The report is being assembled by state government staff and will be distributed in draft form via e-mail to the task force participants. Their responses will be made by e-mail, with the final report to be posted on a web-site later this fall.

'The work of everyone here is not done. It's just started," said one of the members, state Rep. Don Haggar, R-Sioux Falls.

Among other specific recommendations under consideration are a business-led program to encourage other businesses to hire people with disabilities, offering culturalcompetency training on a continuing basis for people working in disabilities-assistance programs and expanding the availability of financial benefit specialists to work with people with disabilities and their families.

Two overall goals are to create expectations among people with disabilities that work is a possibility and aim for outcomes that support employment, said Laurie Gill, who chairs the task force. She is state commissioner of human resources and the

Dinsdale Launches Neb. GOP Senate Bid

BY GRANT SCHULTE

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Omaha banker Sid Dinsdale kicked off his U.S. Senate campaign on Monday with a vow to serve no more than two terms if elected to the open seat next year.

The Republican hopeful cast himself as a pro-business social conservative and Washington outsider during a campaign stop in Lincoln. He also railed against gov-ernment regulations that he deemed too intrusive for

"I intend to be a citizen senator — someone who has actually created jobs, made payroll, grown a business and, more importantly, someone who isn't afraid to admit that I made a few mistakes along the way," Dinsdale said.
"I only intend to serve two terms. If I can't get what needs to be done by then, I won't deserve to go back for a third term anyway.

Dinsdale said his campaign would highlight his opposition to abortion, his support for congressional term limits, limiting government's involvement in business and reducing the nation's dependence on foreign oil.

Funeral preplanning is one of the most thoughtful things you can do for your family.

Why should I have preplanning?

- · Decisions tend to be colored by grief, not governed by reason.
- You select your casket. You select the funeral service you want. You decide how much to spend.
- Loving family members are sometimes so moved by emotions that they spend more than you would have wanted to or less than you deserve.
