SD Hunger Advocates Raise Awareness

Hunger advocates in South Dakota and across the country will be wearing orange on Sept. 4 in an effort to raise awareness of the 50 million people in the United States who face hunger. It's just one of the many awareness events taking place throughout the month of September in recognition of Feeding America's Hunger Action Month — a month-long campaign to help end hunger in our country.

This September, Feeding South Dakota and other food banks in the Feeding America network are encouraging people of all ages to participate in Hunger Action Month. This nationwide movement is an effort to inspire people of all ages to take action to help the millions of people who are food insecure in the United States.

are food insecure in the United States.

Feeding South Dakota will be kicking off the month by encouraging individuals and businesses to share the official '30 Ways in 30 Days' calendar with family, friends and co-workers. Other Hunger Action Month events include local food drives, a coloring contest, a movie night in Rapid City and asking businesses across the state to donate their marquees and light their buildings orange (the symbolic color of hunger). Hundreds of volunteers are expected to participate in food bank activities throughout South Dakota.

"We all know that hunger exists in other parts of the world, but we tend not to notice that it also happens right here in our community," said Matt Gassen, Executive Director of Feeding South Dakota. "With 1 in 8 people at risk of going hungry in our state, the need is real. We're hoping that our efforts during Hunger Action Month will raise awareness of the issue of hunger."

The issue of hunger is of particular importance now when 1 in 6 people in the United States are at risk of hunger. Nationally, there are 50 million people who struggle with hunger — including 16 million children.

Here in South Dakota, about 12.3 percent of the population struggles with hunger, including 37,770 children.

"It's a shame that in the 'land of plenty' we have neighbors and friends who have to worry about where they will get their next meal," said Bob Aiken, CEO of Feeding America. "By raising awareness and working together, we can solve hunger."

John Thune (R-S.D.) is encouraging South Dakota residents in Minnehaha, Lincoln and Union counties to consider applying for Small Business Administration (SBA) disaster assistance

"While I was disappointed to learn FEMA denied our request for

"I will continue working with Gov. Daugaard and other members of the delegation to support our local communities and ensure we provide assistance to those in need. Together we'll help our communities recover."

NPPD Warns Customers About Phone Scams

COLUMBUS, Neb. —
There have been an increased number of phone scam incidents reported this week to the Nebraska Public Power District by NPPD customers. Incidents in Kearney and O'Neill have prompted NPPD to advise all customers, statewide, to be wary of suspicious calls.

Customers have reported receiving scam calls from individuals stating that they are with 'the electric utility' and they are collecting for a past due amount on an electric bill.

They state the bill must be paid immediately or the power will be shut off. Sometimes the scammer's caller-identification is falsified so it appears to originate from the utility company, a practice known as "spoofing" as "spoofing."

In the case of a Kearney customer, the caller advised to go to a local store, purchase a "green dot" or prepaid card, then contact the caller with the card information.

tion.
In O'Neill, NPPD customers have been told there would be a 'meter upgrade' or a power outage, situations that sound like utility business, but when questions are asked, the caller hangs up or puts the customer on hold.

To help customers be wary of such scams, NPPD offers the following tips and suggestions:

• NPPD, as a business practice, does not call to ask customers for a credit card number.

• NPPD does not demand payment with a pre-paid card.

Any customer receiving such a call should not attempt to make payment over the phone.
Write down the call

• Write down the call back number or consider asking where the caller is located.

• Contact law enforcement.

• Let NPPD's Centralized Customer Care Center at 1-877-ASK-NPPD (877-275-6773) know about the call.

• If served electrically by a rural public power district or municipality, customers should contact that organization before providing any type of payment.

"Unfortunately, these scams take place every year throughout the country," said Vice President of Customer Services Ken Curry. "Anyone who receives such a call should not let their guard down. Instead, know that NPPD offers a variety of payment plans to help customers who may have challenges paying their bills, and inform local law enforcement of the incident."

SD Partners In Policy Making Course To Be Offered

PIERRE — The South Dakota Partners in Policymaking course is being offered again in 2014.

This is a state-of-theart training course, designed for parents of children with disabilities, self-advocates and family members.

South Dakota will be starting its 23rd year of the well renowned training in November. To date, more than 500 South Dakotans have successfully completed the training.

Partners learn about current issues and best practices and become familiar with the policymaking and legislative processes at the local, state and national levels.

The overall goal is to achieve a productive partnership between people needing and using services and those in a position to make policy and law. Partners attend two-day training sessions, six times a year, with each session beginning on Friday morning and concluding mid-afternoon on Saturday.

Each session is devoted to specific topics with nationally known presenters.

The world needs Partner graduates who hold social responsibility as a core value; not only to help people interpret the cards they've been dealt, but know what to do with those cards to make the best hand for them and for everyone.

Being a Partner means that you are not alone and you are a better person, friend and member of our ever changing and challenging world. Partners will challenge you to think before you speak, speak before you act and to act before you ever give up!
