Manufacturing Week Planned

The Yankton Area Chamber of Commerce and Manufacturing Committee is making plans to commemorate the second annual South Dakota Manufacturing Week, which will be held Sept. 29-Oct. 3.

When manufacturing employs 18.4 percent of a community's workforce, that means it has a major impact on everyone. Manufacturing is one of the four major industries that contribute to the economy of Yankton and the industry will again be celebrating their industry's impact during Manufacturing

Gov. Dennis Daugaard proclaimed the last week of September as South Dakota Manufacturing Week culminating with National Manufacturers Day on Oct. 3. The Governor's Office of Economic Development is working on events across the state to help raise awareness of what this industry does for the state and is encouraging communities to join in.

"This is a great opportunity for Yankton to showcase our manufacturing sector and the impact it has on not only the local economy but statewide as well as globally" states Chamber Executive Director Carmen Schramm. Yankton has 2.5 times the national average of manufacturers with over $20,000,000 in taxable sales.

A manufacturing committee, with representatives from the Chamber, RTEC (Regional Technical Education Center). S.D. Department of Labor and Regulation and several manufacturers has been created to help coordinate events for the week. With the manufacturing of products from compound bows to aggregate rock crushers, the week for Yankton's celebration was decided to be themed "Manufacturing - This is How We Roll." The week will include a CEO/General Manager Kickoff Social, public tours, tours for high school students, Open Houses, Career Fair, and some new events as well. The dates of the public tours and open houses are as

 Monday, Sept. 29 — Lewis & Clark Hydraulics: 9 a.m.-noon; TruXedo, Inc.: 9 a.m.-noon: L&M Radiator, Inc. 1 p.m. - 4 p.m.

• Tuesday, Sept. 30 — School Tours: 8:30 a.m. - 3:35 p.m.

• Wednesday, Oct. 1 — Bow Creek Metal, Inc.; 9 a.m.-

noon; Vishay Dale Electronics, Inc.: 1-4 p.m.; Manitou Americas, Inc.: 1-4 p.m.; Career Fair (SD Dept. of Labor):

2-4 p.m. • Thursday, Oct. 2 — SAPA Health & Safety Fair: 7 a.m.-1 p.m. (Manufacturer employees only); Kolberg-Pioneer, Inc.: 9 a.m.-noon; Yankton High School CTE Open House: 1-3 p.m.; RTEC Open House: 2-6 p.m.

• Friday, Oct. 3 — Applied Engineering, Inc.: 9 a.m.-noon; Xpedition Archery: 9 a.m.noon; inaugural Manufacturers Olympics: 3-6 p.m. (Manufacturer employees only)

Radio interviews will take place during the week to educate the public on the products that are manufactured locally and how those products impact daily lives. There will be a Facebook campaign highlighting Yankton manufacturers and their finished products. Local access channels for Midcontinent Communication Channel 3 and WOW! Channel 98 will showcase local manufacturing

Through the support of Yankton Area Progressive Growth, Inc. an additional video has been produced for this industry. The videos will be used for workforce recruitment, manufacturing awareness and quality of life messages to be used by the industry, the Chamber and YAPG in their economic development efforts.

The week-long event will end on Friday, Oct. 3, with a new event geared towards those employed in manufacturing. Local manufacturers have been asked to select a team to compete in some fun activities at the 1st Annual Manufacturers Olympics at Riverside Park. These events are intended to be team building exercises and yet make for a fun yet competitive comradery between manufacturers. After the scores are tallied and the top three teams are selected, there will be food and refreshments for the teams and their fellow employees to celebrate. In case of inclement weather, the events will be moved in doors to The Old Mill, 104 Capitol St.

the library's "Caught Reading a Banned Book" wall.

'The point of Banned Book Week is to have freedom of access to all materials for everyone," said Yankton Library Director Kathy Wibbels. "We are celebrating our freedom to read whatever we choose to read - not because someone likes it or dislikes it, but because we choose to.'

According to Banned-BooksWeek.com, 11,300 books have been challenged since 1982, when the event was launched. The America Library Association defines a challenged book as a work that has been targeted by an attempt to remove or restrict materials, based upon the objections of a person or group.

Some popular banned or challenged titles include "Fifty Shades of Grey," "The Hunger Games," "The Perks of Being a Wallflower," "The Kite Runner," "Gone With The Wind," "Where the Wild Things Are" and "A Clockwork Orange.'

Wibbels said that she feels that a variety of books of all different viewpoints needs to stay in the library so people can form their own opinions.

"Especially opinions on social issues," Wibbels said. 'The library tries to get as many sides as it can so that anyone coming into the library can read all the information that we can offer so that they can decide whether they are for or against something.

Wibbels said that people sometimes choose a side only because one side vells louder rather than getting that information for themselves.

"People are swayed sometimes not by the information that we have, but the lack of information they have,' Wibbels said. "That's what public libraries are all about: Access to that information."

Wibbels said the library does have a collection development policy that addresses how it should buy materials and later

"The policy talks about having balance in the collection so that we aren't telling one side of the story," she said. "Sometimes, we do have people come up and tell us something shouldn't be on the shelf.

For this situation the library has a stepped process a person can go through to get the book banned or challenged.

A person can fill out a form with their reasoning. It then comes to me and I decide whether or not it should be on the shelf," Wibbels said. "If they don't like the decision that I make the case can be taken to the library board and be tried in a hearing process.'

Ŵibbels said that one of the questions on the form is if the person has read the entire book or viewed the entire movie that the complainant finds objectionable.

We want to know if the person has just picked out a scene or word that they didn't like," she said. "If they haven't read the whole book or have seen the whole movie, how will they know what that scene has to do with the overall content and subject matter of the movie or book? It makes people really stop and think about what they are objecting to.

Senior Library Assistant Joyce Brunken could recall only one case that was brought to the library board in the 30 years she has worked there. She said that that the complaining individual did not agree to the book based on religious views. "We actually decided to keep the book," Brunken said. "Rather than censor it from other people, we just said that they would have to choose not to read it or look at it.

The mission of the Yankton Community Library is to uphold the public's freedom of access to information by providing a dynamic collection in a variety of formats and technologies, and responding to the needs of the community through timely services and programs, Wibbels said.

'Banned Book Week goes with our mission perfectly," she said.
