And given that Thursday was one of the warmest days of the year, Neswick's performance was all the more impressive.

"You don't know what you're going to shoot at the start of the day, but as the round went on, I felt more confident with every shot," Neswick said.

During his 18-hole round, Neswick said he missed six greens, but was able to get up and down for par on five of those occasions – the formula for a good day.

"When you're hitting the ball well and the short game is on, you know you'll have a pretty decent score," Neswick said. As Schlimgen pointed out,
