Pope To Celebrate Contribution Of Hispanics At Mass In DC

WASHINGTON — The first pope from the Americas will canonize a Spanish friar who brought the Catholic faith to California in front of the largest Catholic church in North America.

There will be plenty of symbolism in Pope Francis' visit to Washington next week, and the city's archbishop said Thursday that while the pope will be speaking as a pastor, not a politician, he could address an issue that bitterly divides the nation's leaders: immi-

"I think the message of the Holy Father is going to be the message he's been giving now for a long time: There has to be a way to welcome people who are so desperately trying to share what we already have," said Cardinal Donald Wuerl, the archbishop of Washington. "I suspect the Holy Father will highlight that in some way.'

Pope Francis will celebrate the Mass of canonization for Junipero Serra in Spanish, and several thousand of the 25,000 tickets to the event will be reserved for Spanishspeaking people, many of them from California, Wuerl

Mount Marty Celebrates Pope's Visit To America

As a symbol of Christian unity and hospitality, Mount Marty College will join other schools, churches, libraries and hospitals by "Illuminating the Mission: 7 Days – 7 Pages." Beginning Monday, Sept. 21, and each day of Pope Francis's visit, the college will join institutions across the country by highlighting the same page of The Saint John's Bible Heritage Edition. Monday through Friday the pages and illuminations will be displayed near The Raven, MMC's Campus Ministry Center.

The following pages and illuminations will be displayed during the week: Monday, framed illumination "Creation" from Genesis; Tuesday, "Abraham and Sarah" illumination; and Wednesday, 'Ten Commandments" illumination from Exodus. Thursday and Friday, pages from the Gospels and Acts volume will be displayed, with the page opened to "Peter's Confession" from Matthew on Thursday and the two-page illumination of "The Multiplication of the Loaves and Fishes" from Mark on Friday. Saturday and Sunday, the Gospels and Acts volume will travel to the Sacred Heart Monastery as part of Benedictine Days, with the "Two Cures" page from Mark being highlighted Saturday, followed by the "Pentecost" page from the Acts of the Apostles being

The week will culminate Sunday evening with Fr. Michael Patella presenting the Fall Benedictine Lecture titled "The Saint John's Bible: A Spiritual Encounter with God." The presentation begins at 7 p.m. in Marian Auditorium. Doors will open at 6 p.m. for a book viewing of Gospels and Acts and the Historical Books volumes of the Heritage Edition.

According to Saint John's Rev. Michael Patella, OSB, who chaired the scholarship effort behind The Saint John's Bible, 'These illuminations were specifically chosen because they resonate with values Pope Francis holds dear: hospitality; concern for the poor, sick and marginalized; the dignity of all people; and care for

In addition to the illuminated pages, a reflection for each day, written by Saint John's University School of Theology and Seminary, will accompany the display.

Cubans Hope Pope Will Accelerate Warming Relations With America

BY MICHAEL WEISSENSTEIN AND NICOLE WINFIELD

Associated Press

HAVANA — Seventeen years ago, a newly named Argentine archbishop laid out his thoughts on the meaning of a papal

"Through the presence, the voice and the prophetic mission of the pope, the church offers a path forward to peace, justice and true liberty," Jorge Mario Bergoglio wrote. "Not everything will be the same after he leaves."

Millions of Cubans hope those words written about John Paul II's 1998 trip to Cuba prove true when their author, now Pope Francis, flies into Havana on Saturday.

Across the island, Cubans are excitedly looking at the pope's 10-day trip to Cuba and the United States through the lens of his role as the mediator of detente between the two countries. Many say they expect the visit to help transform the diplomatic warming from a phase of abstract political negotiation into real benefits for the Cuban people.

"The pope achieved the re-establishment of relations between the two countries," said Miguel Marcelino, a member of a worker-owned gardening services cooperative. "A big part of why he's coming is so that there's new momentum in that relationship.'

In a series of interviews across Havana this week, people almost universally said they would be at Francis' Mass in the Plaza of the Revolution on Sunday. Virtually none said they would attend because of

'I've never been to a Mass. I don't know what that is," motorcycle taxi driver Jose Manuel Echevarria said as he waited for a friend to return with an axle to replace one snapped by one of Havana's many deep potholes. He's going to the plaza to watch an event that he expects to have strong historical significance.

"He's coming to Havana and then he's going from Havana to the U.S.," Echevarria said of Francis. "It's obvious, no? He's not going for any other reason.

Vatican officials are cautioning that the pope's mission is pastoral, not political, saying people should expect no explicit diplomatic message. But some longtime observers of Francis said it is clear he sees the visit as many Cubans do — as the second stage of his role in midwifing normal relations between Washington and Havana.

'Francis won't explicitly be political at all when he's here, but everything he does will be profoundly political in its implications," said Austen Ivereigh, author of "The Great Reformer: Francis and the Making of a Radical Pope.

The pope feels the half century of hostility between the U.S. and Cuba polarized the politics of Latin America, forcing people to choose between Washington's and Havana's visions for the region, Ivereigh said.

While the pope values the social achievements of Cuba's revolution such as free universal health care and education, he has staunchly criticized its decades of repression. He looks to healing the rift between the U.S. and Cuba as a way of steering the island on a path toward a new system that both cares for the needy and provides liberty while avoiding the excesses of capitalism, providing a potential model for the region.

"He has a very ambitious vision for Latin America, and Cuba plays a key role in that," Ivereigh said.

Francis has downplayed his role in the detente, saying he did "only little things," but both Presidents Barack Obama and Raul Castro praised the pope in their Dec. 17, 2014, speeches announcing the deal. Obama noted the importance of Francis' "personal appeal" to both leaders in a pair of secret letters at a critical stage in the 18 months of secret negotiations.
